Happy New Year!

It was November 2008 when we published our first VivaTysons Magazine. Retired from a 35-year career in the food business and noticing the struggles many of my customers were having trying to compete with the well-capitalized public companies, I decided the persons who most needed a cheerleader and friend in the media were the small, independent brick and mortar community businesses. They are the ones who support the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Little League, public school projects... and whose existence is dependent on a thriving small business community.

The concept of the "3/50 Project" whose purpose was to retain locally owned businesses whose dollars provided a large portion of annual revenue critical for funding public resources and services caught our eyes and hearts.

The simple consumer-friendly message spoken in "dinner table language" asked consumers to think of three businesses they would miss if they disappeared—and to remember that their support is what keeps them open. The number 50 calls to our attention that if just half of the current population dedicated just $50 of their current monthly spending to 3 locally owned businesses more than $42.6 billion of revenue would be generated annually. The project claimed that for every $100 spent in local businesses more than $68 returns to the local economy. Spend that amount in a big box or chain store, the amount drops to only $43, and money spent online (except if you live in the e-tailers town) nothing comes home. Nothing. This was in 2009.

As I look at the retail landscape today, even tonight only 11 days from Christmas, I am amazed at how empty many of my favorite stores are—and saddened by the look in the eyes of many of the sales and service persons who have been hoping for a brighter holiday to bring them into the black. I know the convenience and competitive pricing available to us online. But I can also see the effect it has brought to our local merchants. (Ouch). We promise to continue to support them any way we can; we hope you’ll do the same. "Keep it Local" is still our rallying cry.

Despite this disconnect between Wall Street and main street, I remain hopefully optimistic about tomorrow. (David Susskind used to say he was pessimistic about tomorrow but optimistic about the day after tomorrow. Sounds about right.)

There's some interesting reading for us this issue. Keith talks to David Baldacci about his new book End Game and interviews Hall of Fame drummer Max Weinberg, Mike Isabella Eatery goes live and there's a little something on green diamonds by Linda Barrett. Analiese Kreutzer gives us some options for summer camps for the upcoming season.

There's interesting reading on Virginia's certified grass-fed farm in Marshall, and please say hello to some of the top service providers and merchants we work with featured in the "Faces of Tysons."

Looking for tips on making the perfect smoothie? Go to page 78, and read about "Blender Girl”—thanks, Reneé!  And for health and beauty, our Le Nouveau Moi section is packed with information on looking and feeling your best. MI, you're the best!

Did you know that dogs get the flu?  It's news to me, see page 138. Wanna laugh?  Jan King's "Weekend with Grandma" left me in stitches.

Once again, please know that everyone here will be working to bring our community closer this upcoming year, and we wish you a healthy, happy and peaceful New Year.

Since its formation in 2004, the Ben Miller Band has staked out a singular niche that’s established the Joplin, Missouri threesome as both a potent creative force and a perennial fan favorite. JANUARY 13

MARK WENNERS BLUES WARRIORS
Jammin Java, 8pm, $20
The iconic blues band The Nighthawks take January off but band leader and harp virtuoso Mark Wenner isn’t about resting on his laurels. Each January Mark brings some amazing side project and tonight is no exception. Digging in the renowned collections of ’50s blues labels Chess, Vee Jay and Excello, Mark brings together some shining traditional blues from the Chicago and Louisiana schools. He shows them off with a band created just for tonight. Mark’s Blues Warriors feature Mark Wenner’s harp and vocals and up-and-coming DC-based Clarence “Bluesman” Turner. Clarence’s creative guitar playing and authentic vocals have garnered him a fast-growing following in DC. The accomplished band is flushed out with Steve Wolf on upright bass, Robert Frahm (for yet another hot guitarist), and the Nighthawks’ own Mark Stutso on drums and vocals.

JANUARY 14

RORIE
Jammin Java, 7:30pm, $15
Rorie’s new EP, Dawn, is a lush combination of electro and cinematic pop, while still maintaining her signature, singer-songwriter sound. The EP was produced by award-winning producer Tommee Profitt in Nashville, TN. As a whole, Rorie’s music tells stories of both heartache and hope. Known for poetic lyrics and ambient vocals, Rorie and her band have captivated rooms of all ages. In July 2016, she released her debut EP, Singing & Silence, which was featured in the iTunes Singer-Songwriter New Artist Spotlight. These songs feature intricate composition, uplifting melodies, and thought-provoking lyrics. Prior to this, Rorie released a single, “Restore,” which was funded by 98 Kickstarter backers. The song was inspired by her time working for an anti-human trafficking non-profit in NYC, and has resulted in bi-annual donations to organizations that are doing this important work.

HONEYSUCKLE
Jammin Java, 7:30pm, $15

Make math into a fun puzzle and STEM aspirations become accessible.

What if math was a fun puzzle that you couldn’t wait to explore?

Imagine a wooden cube made of colorful rectangular prisms, painted in shining yellow, red, blue, and black. A puzzle that fits into a box, but only if put together just so. Twenty-seven pieces, which physically represent the trinomial formula, \((a+b+c)^3\).

That’s the Montessori Trinomial Cube.

A four-year-old who discovers patterns. A five-year-old who (blindfolded!) completes a puzzle that baffles many adults. A Montessori 5th grader who, when studying the algebraic expression \((a+b+c)^3\), recalls the same colorful puzzle from his preschool days and, with a smile, thinks, “but of course!”

That’s how joyful learning builds from concrete to abstract at LePort Montessori.

How do you get children excited about math and science? In Montessori, the magic happens in a carefully prepared environment—where a trained, caring teacher observes each child, gives an individualized lesson with an irresistible material, and allows them to master it at their own pace.

The Montessori sensorial materials prepare preschoolers for arithmetic, algebra, geometry and science. Watch the puzzle solved and see how it concretizes the trinomial formula.

Together they delve into the canon of works inspired by folk music, beginning with Brahms and Debussy, and ending with their own arrangements.

CHRIS BARRON
“ANGELS & ONE ARMED JUGGLERS” CD RELEASE SHOW
Jammmin Java, 8pm, $20
Ask Barron for a pivotal moment from his journey and he'll rewind the reels to a high-school music theory class, where a cherished teacher advised him to “learn the rules so that you can break them.” Almost four decades later, that same irreverent wisdom hangs over Angels and One-Armed Jugglers. In a cynical era of songwriting by committee, these eleven songs rip up the verse/chorus template, eschew the stock lyrical themes and crash thrillingly among genres, as this fascinating songwriter acts entirely on instinct. “These songs range from old jazz standards to funky beer-hall folk tunes. But I’ve never really been that interested in genres. I think the reason it’s so eclectic is because the songs were chosen more thematically than based on genre.”

JANUARY 26
THE ALTERNATE ROUTES: THE ODDSMAKERS TOUR
Union Stage, 8pm, $18
The Alternate Routes are the band that helped us to remember “we are how we treat each other, and nothing more.” Now they’re back with a new single, “Safe Haven”—a love song that uses real life as its backdrop. “Safe Haven” continues the socially-conscious, no-holds-barred examination on modern living that the band has increasingly embraced. It reflects an evolution and maturity that results from sticking together and trying new things, musically and lyrically, for over a decade.

JANUARY 26-27
AARON TVEIT
The Barns at Wolf Trap, 8pm, $40-55
A charming veteran of stage and screen productions including Grease Live!, Les Miserables, Gossip Girl, and Graceland returns to The Barns for two evenings filled with Broadway favorites and pop tunes.

DUBLIN IRISH DANCE
Stepping Out
George Mason University Center for the Arts, Concert Hall, 8pm, $20-50
Follow the evolution of Celtic... culture in Stepping Out, a high-energy extravaganza of sights and sounds presented by Dublin Irish Dance. These accomplished Irish step-dancers and musicians take us on a journey, exploring the history of the Celtic cultural experience through song and dance. This entertaining production reveals influences that have shaped Irish music and dance throughout history: from the farms of rural Ireland in the 1800s, to the Great Famine and the mass migration to New York, where Irish and American cultures blended and influenced each other. This production features the fast footwork of talented Irish step-dancers, an eight-member traditional Irish band, and a vocalist—many of whom have performed with internationally famous Irish ensembles like Riverdance, Michael Flatley’s Lord of the Dance, and Celtic Woman.

January 27
PITTSBURGH’S OWN JOE GRUSHECKY AND THE HOUSE ROCKERS
Janmin Java, 8pm, $18
In 1979 Rolling Stone magazine crowned his band’s, the Iron City Houserockers, first album Love’s So Tough the “debut record of the year.” Acclaimed rock writer Jimmy Guterman, named their second album, Have a Good Time (But Get Out Alive) as one of the 100 best rock & roll records of all time! Legendary guitarist and Rock Hall of Famer Steve Cropper produced Blood on the Bricks. Rock superstar and Hall of Famer, Bruce Springsteen, produced American Babylon in 1995 and continues to perform with the band and write with Joe including the Grammy winning “Code of Silence.”
In a world where truth is rare and nothing seems genuine anymore, some things remains constant...there is still real music being made out there. And Joe Grushecky is still making it.

January 28

For this tour, they have created new arrangements featuring music of David Bowie, The Police, and Steely Dan, as well as fresh interpretations of iconic

William Shakespeare’s iconic 15th century language meets Benjamin Britten’s 20th century inventive and enchanting music in this delightful opera about love, forgiveness, and the power of dreams. A domestic dispute between the king and queen of fairies spills into the human realm, creating chaos as the stories of three couples and a troupe of amateur actors collide with hilarious results. Nothing is what it seems as fairies, “rude mechanicals,” and moonstruck young lovers spend a single, magical night in the forest. Adam Turner conducts this opera’s lush dynamic score while many Virginia Opera favorites—soprano Heather Buck (Titania), baritone Matthew Burns (Bottom), and tenor David Blalock (Lysander)—return to perform in this comic tour de force. Sung in English with English supertitles.

For over 40 years, the ever-reliable Marcia Ball has put Springsteen’s Emmy award-winning lighting director. Bruce in the USA is much more than just another tribute...it’s a shore thing! This high-energy musical experience is a note-perfect and visually accurate recreation of a Springsteen show that turns into one giant Jersey party! Even Bruce fans at the Stone Pony in Asbury Park (some of the toughest critics in the world) were amazed by Matt Ryan’s jaw-dropping portrayal of the Boss." As one fan aptly put it... "We were expecting to see a "tribute" to Bruce Springsteen. But, what we saw could have been the Boss himself!"

Jammin Java, 8pm, $20

Gauthier’s first nine albums presented extraordinary confessional songs, deeply personal, profoundly emotional pieces ranging from “I Drink,” a blunt accounting of addiction, to “March 11, 1962,” the day she was born—and relinquished to an orphanage—to “Worthy.”

in which the singer finally understands she is deserving of love. Maybe that’s where the confessional song cycle ends, for she has midwifed these eleven new songs in careful collaboration with other souls whose struggle is urgent, immediate, and palpable. And none are about her.

Each song on Rifles and Rosary Beads, Mary Gauthier’s tenth album, is a gut punch: deceptively simple and emotionally complex. From the opening “Soldiering On” (“What saves you in the battle/Can kill you at home”) to “Bullet Holes in the Sky” (“They thank me you at home”) to “Bullet Holes in the Sky” (“They thank me you at home”) to “Bullet Holes in the Sky” (“They thank me you at home”) to “Bullet Holes in the Sky” (“They thank me you at home”) to “Bullet Holes in the Sky” (“They thank me you at home”), this special evening features The Gershwin Big Band, led by the next Harry Connick, Jr. (The New York Post), Michael Andrew.

As summarized by the production’s director, Eleanore Tapscott, “This is a play that is wise and witty and spiritual in a wonderfully breezy way.” Performances of Harvey are Fridays and Saturdays at 8pm and Sunday matinees on March 11 and 18 at 2pm. Tickets are $18-$20 and are available at www.McLeanPlayers.org or at the door.
Max Weinberg is probably best known as the drummer of Bruce Springsteen’s E Street Band, having played behind the kit since 1975 and being part of the Boss’ biggest hits such as “Born to Run,” “Born in the USA,” “Dancing in the Dark,” “Thunder Road,” “Badlands” and “Hungry Heart.”

Additionally, the Hall of Fame drummer served as Conan O’Brien’s bandleader for 17 years, was lead drummer on Meatloaf’s 1977 album Bat Out of Hell and was part of Southside Johnny’s Hearts of Stone and Better Days albums.

Fresh off Springsteen’s hugely successful The River Tour 2016-2017—where the E Street Band performed 89 concerts nearly four hours long each night in 15 countries, Weinberg has spent the better part of the last six months with a touring concept for the small venue—a night he calls, “Max Weinberg’s Jukebox.”

“I compiled a list of about 400 songs that were somehow close to me as I became a drummer, and became close to me as I became a better drummer when I was a little older,” Weinberg says. “It runs the gamut from the Beatles to AC/DC to Led Zeppelin to Bruce, the Stones to all the English invasion bands.”

The drummer first performed his jukebox concert last summer in a club in Evanston, Illinois and immensely enjoyed the playlist.

“People have a really good time because they get to hear the songs that they want to hear, played by guys who take this era of material very, very seriously, except we do it with a lot of fun,” Weinberg says. “If you look back at my history as a drummer, I love sitting in with people, I generally play whatever they play. I came up as a drummer playing whatever the leader of the band wanted. You get adapted to fulfilling requests.”
In 2018, there will be several opportunities for people in our area to check out Weinberg and his tour. First up, he'll be performing at Rams Head on Jan. 14. Then he'll close out the Wolf Trap season at the Barns with two shows, May 4 and 5.

Max Weinberg's Jukebox is set up with gigantic screens enveloping both sides of the stage. On the screens will be a continuous, scrolling list of classic songs and audience members shout out the ones they want to hear.

The list of songs includes 90 Beatles tunes, hits by The Rolling Stones, Tommy James and the Shondells, Paul Revere & the Raiders, and a healthy dose of Springsteen songs. Sometimes, the band even plays songs that aren't on Weinberg's list.

"Rock and Roll" by Led Zeppelin was called out the other night, and it's not on the list. So we said, "We'll give it a shot, we've heard it a million times, and it came off great," Weinberg says.

He also connects songs to his career. For example, The Who's "I Can See for Miles" is often requested, and it brings Weinberg back 40 years or so.

Although the Beatles tunes tend to be most popular, he's found that David Bowie's "The Jean Genie" and "Daydream Believer" by The Monkees are two songs that always seem to be requested.

"There are songs from the '60s and '70s that I grew up with and I feel particularly close to for one reason or another, and it turns out that the people who come to see this band feel particularly close to them, too," Weinberg says. "It's a very interactive night. I go out in the audience, say hello to people and ask them where they're from."

On most nights, Weinberg will survey the crowd for any wannabe drummers and often invites people on stage to play with the band. He describes his role on the night as a combination of Dave Clark, of the band The Dave Clark Five, and Dick Clark, the legendary host of American Bandstand.

"I'm sort of the host and drummer and we've been having just a ball," he says. "I never know what we're going to play, it's up to the audience. But it always ends up being a memorable night."
As Restaurant Association of Metropolitan Washington 2016 Restaurateur of the Year, Mike Isabella is ready for the challenge. He is chef/owner of 13 restaurants in the D.C./Maryland/Virginia area. “This project really represents the next frontier for me. Everything my team has built over the last seven years, from Graffiato and Kapnos, to Arroz and Requin, is coming together to create a brand-new type of dining experience for Northern Virginia,” Isabella said. “It’s something that hasn’t been done before on this level, and I don’t think it would be possible without the talented group of chefs, managers and beverage professionals we have at Mike Isabella Concepts (MIC).”

DESIGN

Working with Streetsense, an integrated design and architecture firm, the team developed a plan to offer a cohesive dining experience, while also differentiating each concept with an aesthetic reflecting its cuisine and style of service. Soaring ceilings and elaborate architectural elements unify the individual spaces. Standout features include hand-painted murals, a living wall of greenery in Nonfiction Coffee, and custom light installations, including a 25-foot wide, 5,000-pound tower of illuminated rings in Graffiato.

DINING

Isabella Eatery features adaptations of Isabella’s popular restaurants along with new works. Culinary director Joe Palma oversees menu development and kitchen operations ranging from fast-casual and upscale dining to carry-out and full-service offsite catering.

“The service aspect of Isabella Eatery is really what sets the concept of a food emporium apart from the common impression of a food hall,” Palma explained. “Guests can make reservations at several of the restaurants, they’re seated by a host, and there’s a common dining area with one menu for multiple restaurants.” A key differentiator from conventional food halls, this Dining Hall offers guests full-service dining with a consolidated menu of signature items from Arroz, Octagon Bar, Pepita, Requin Oysters & Champagne and Yona.

MANY CONCEPTS TO CHOOSE FROM

Isabella’s second location of Arroz offers a taste of Spain marked by classic and contemporary presentations of tapas, pintxos and bocadillos, as well as a sangria bar. Taking the place of traditional paella are pans of fluffy-meets-crunchy baked bomba rice—a dish that is purely MIC.

Graffiato offers Italian-inspired sharable plates, antipasti boards, handmade pastas and focaccia pizzas at this offshoot of Isabella’s flagship restaurant. Reservations are accepted in the full-service dining area, while a takeout window makes for easy grab-and-go eating.

Kapnos Marketa, the marketplace spinoff of Isabella’s Greek triad serves shaved meats atop customizable gyros, grain bowls and salads, spit-roasted lamb, pork, chicken and wood-grilled vegetables by the pound, spreads and other specialty items packaged for takeout. Retail goods include Kapnos-branded Greek wines and MIC’s signature saison from 3 Stars Brewing Company.

Perched on a walkway that connects the two wings of Isabella Eatery, Octagon Bar overhangs the galleria’s lower levels and serves an extensive list of prohibition-style classic cocktails alongside a selection of dishes curated from the Dining Hall concepts, including a full raw bar and steaks.

Nonfiction Coffee features beans from artisan roasters, pour-over coffees, specialty espresso beverages and a selection of teas. Opening at 7am daily, Nonfiction Coffee is accessible from two-story canopied elevators that whisk guests from Isabella Eatery’s street entrance inside, where they’re greeted by fully stocked pastry cases, warm focaccia panini, acai and chia puddings, salads, co-branded Jrink juices and more.

Like its sister in Arlington, Va., Pepita serves Mexican staples like tacos, nachos, quesadillas and burritos. The full-service bar also offers a small Mexican beer selection, a robust tequila lineup, plus classic and frozen margaritas.

Oysters, seafood cocktails, crudos and tartares anchor the menu at Requin Oysters & Champagne raw bar, which also features cooked coastal favorites like mussels, crab cakes and lobster rolls, as well as a selection of champagne and white wine. Caviar and cured fish are available for retail purchase.

Retro Creamery, a modern take on an ice cream parlor and soda shop of the 1950s, forms the sweet core of Isabella Eatery’s offerings. The classic and contemporary flavors are the base of sundaes, ice cream sandwiches, banana splits, pre-packed cartons and house-made waffle cones.

A departure from the ramen-centric menu at its Arlington location, Yona focuses on sushi, sashimi, poke bowls and other Japanese small plates served alongside sake.

With its many options, Isabella Eatery is quickly becoming a major dining destination for Tysons residents and visitors. Reservations are available via Open Table for Arroz, Graffiato, and the Dining Hall.

Imagine a world where all people live healthy and decent lives. That is what many students throughout the Northern Virginia area are starting to do thanks to the efforts of the Health Is Right School Program. This Youth Teams project is another brainchild of Dr. Kavian Milani, whose Center for Health and Human Rights (CHHR) is the sponsor of the Youth Teams. CHHR has been featured in VivaTysons/Reston previously.

The idea is to empower middle and high school youth in the area to tackle challenging issues in their schools to improve the lives of people in their communities. The hope is to create a culture where a student can identify a problem and know that they have the power to fix it.

Teams of students meet on a regular basis to explore how they might impact their communities. They are asked to consider what one change would create healthier and better lives for the community. After brainstorming ideas, the teams figure out if they can turn that change into a service project. CHHR works with the school groups to turn their plans into reality, providing funding if needed, offering help with volunteers, and delivering a curriculum the students go through to better engage in human rights activities.

As such each group is at a different stage in their endeavor and each is working on a different social problem. For example, students at Fairfax High School founded their own non-profit organization, working with local foster children to help them finish high school. They found that graduation rates can be significantly lower for foster children so they meet monthly with those students to help them with studying skills, helping to improve reading, and working on test preparation skills. They also have connected with outside organizations to assist those students with other resources they may need such as donated clothing.
Another team at Mount Vernon High School is designing a program to provide food to “food insecure” students. They have already obtained a delivery truck and are now fundraising and running a food drive to supply the necessary food.

Marshall High School students have begun a program to make hygiene products readily available and more accessible to students. They are conducting a drive to place products where they are needed in the school.

At Yorktown High School, Christina Smith Gajadhar is an ESL teacher who has incorporated the Human Rights curriculum and project into one of her classes. The students decided to do a video to help educate others on the immigrant experience.

Ms. Smith Gajadhar reports, “An after-school program wouldn’t work here. Many students work or have other outside activities. I looked at the Universal Declaration of Human Rights curriculum and realized it fit well in conjunction with the literature we study like The Breadwinner and The Kiterunner.

“This program has provided an opportunity for the students to work together. They are learning about leadership and communications and how to work with each other. They have learned how to deal with kids who are not doing their part and they have learned what it means to be responsible to the group. The kids have responded well to the project as they end up thinking beyond themselves. At 14 years old, that is a difficult thing to do.” Their project finished in December and the final video is being promoted on the school website, via twitter, and the school’s daily news.

Health is Right Youth Programs started in May with just an idea and no participation. In six months it grew to 15 schools – two universities, George Mason and Virginia Commonwealth, two middle schools, and 11 high schools. Most are in Fairfax County with two in Arlington. A program has also started at the International School in Langley Park, MD where the entire student body is comprised of immigrants and refugees.

Ron Lapitan is the director of the school program and is very enthusiastic about the Youth Teams and what they are working to achieve. “The value is in cultivating the student leaders’ power of expression to identify the kind of world they want to create. We have this belief that if you want to create a different kind of world, the first step is just being able to imagine it, then talk about it so that you can transfer that vision to other people.

“What inspired Dr. Milani to launch this program is his strong interest in creating a healthier community. It’s not just about establishing easier access to health care, but also developing a vibrant community where people are having conversations about what it means for people to be healthy and what it means for people to have human rights and then acting on those ideas.”

Milani and Lapitan would like to see the youth program expand nationwide. They already have participation at a school in Tampa. With Tampa’s having a large homeless population, the school’s team is looking to repurpose leftover food at restaurants each day to help feed the local homeless.

“We hope that as the program expands geographically it will also continue in existing schools indefinitely,” says Ron. “As students age up and eventually graduate, they will recruit younger students to take on other projects. Our hope is that we can help impact the values of youth throughout their lives, coming away from these teams with a spirit of service, serving humanity and making a better community for all.”

Jonathan Melendez is Prevention Coordination Specialist for the Department of Neighborhood and Community Services at Fairfax County. He adds his own perspective on the implementation of the Health Is Right Youth Program at FCPS middle schools:

“We view this as a great opportunity to provide youth across the county with the tools needed to identify and address concerns within their own communities. While this is a new partnership at the middle school level, Ron’s work with the high schools has been well received. Partnering with organizations that help empower youth, such as the Center for Health and Human Rights, is integral to the success of the Middle School After-School Program.”

Indeed the program “is designed to foster five conditions suggested by Fairfax County research on youth to greatly reduce risky behaviors including sex, alcohol use, drug use, smoking, carrying a weapon, and participating in gangs:

Having high personal integrity

Performing community service

Having teachers recognize good work

Having community adults to talk to

Participating in extracurricular activities

As a female Financial Advisor working in an industry traditionally dominated by men I find myself in the unique position to empower women to pursue their financial goals.

Many of the women I have worked with have made great progress, but industry studies point to a startling fact: when compared to men, women fall short when it comes to investing and saving for retirement.

Instead of concentrating on the differences between men and women and the reasons why women are falling short, I prefer to focus on some core concepts that all women should consider in order to improve their finances.

Invest in yourself

On average, women live longer than men and those extra years should be financially secure. In order to safeguard that security, it is important to prioritize your own savings. Many women are very nurturing and instinctively try to help other people, many times at the expense of their own financial future.

It is easy to put off saving for retirement and prioritize other expenses when you are busy building a career and/or taking care of a family. Retirement saving needs to be a priority - taking care of yourself is just as important as taking care of others. It is not selfish to want to be secure in your retirement.

Create a plan

While it may sound optimistic, an attitude of “it will all work out” is not realistic when it comes to finances. It is not a good idea for anyone to assume that their financial future is secure, or depend on someone else to plan for them. It would be beneficial for every woman, married, single, or somewhere in-between to have a financial plan in place and understand how their financial decisions may affect that plan.

Get educated

Over the years I have met many smart, capable women with amazing careers who shy away from investing because they do not believe they fully understand the process or the risks. This is where a good Financial Advisor can really make a big difference.

Some Advisors assume that female clients do not want to know the details about their investments and the reasoning behind trading or allocation decisions. I believe that educating all clients about their investments and helping them understand any recommended changes is a big part of an Advisor’s job.

My advice is to work with someone who clearly answers any questions you have and helps you understand how your money is being managed. The money is yours. You should understand what your money is invested in, what kinds of risks you are taking, and how your account balance fits into your larger financial picture. Ultimately, your Advisor should make you feel secure with their financial recommendations. If, at the end of an advisory meeting, you do not have clarity, find another Advisor.

Be more aggressive

When compared to men, women tend to be overly cautious when it comes to investing though they live longer and may need to be more aggressive to help their savings grow. My advice: don’t be afraid to be more aggressive! Recognize that you may instinctively want to play it safe, and then allow yourself to consider taking on a little more risk. With the recommendations and support of a good Advisor, who can help you understand the risk/reward trade off, you should have the confidence to step a little out of your comfort zone.

Meet with a professional

Women have been traditionally less likely to seek out professional financial advice, but I have observed a gradual change over the last few years. More women are independently seeking the assistance of a Financial Advisor and recommending that other women do the same. It is important to talk to other women about finances, the more women talk to each other about being involved in handling their own finances, the more comfortable women will be in making important financial decisions.

As investors, women face unique obstacles both in terms of earning money and making that money grow for the future. Despite this challenge, women also have equal access to investing and investment advice. Accumulating adequate resources for longer lives requires substantial savings coupled with reasonably aggressive investing - both of which women are more than able to do.

David Baldacci’s “End Game” Continues Adventures of Will Robie

A once practicing lawyer in Washington D.C. for nine years, David Baldacci found fame with the publication of his first novel, “Absolute Power” in 1996—a story that would gain further prominence as a Clint Eastwood movie.

Once his book became a success, he set aside his law career and over the next 21 years would write 34 best-selling novels, translated into more than 45 languages and sold in more than 80 countries.

However, Baldacci wasn’t a lawyer who turned to writing; he was a writer who happened to be a lawyer.

“It’s what I always wanted to be. When I was a kid, I would try to sell short stories to the New Yorker magazine but I couldn't make a living writing short stories,” he says. “I went to law school and wrote all different types of things—screenplays, short stories, novellas—then came my big break.”

Born in Richmond and having gone to Virginia Commonwealth University for undergrad and the University of Virginia School of Law, Baldacci is a lifelong Virginian and currently lives in Vienna with his wife Michelle.

Baldacci recently released his latest novel, “End Game (Will Robie #5),” following one of his most popular characters, who in this story returns home from a mission overseas to discover that his boss—codenamed Blue Man—has vanished. Robie and Jessica Reel are two of readers' favorite characters.

“It’s easier to write for a recurring character because you’ve already laid down the foundation but it’s almost like an actor in a long-running series, you have to find ways to keep it interesting with new facets of the character’s personality, something new and fresh about them, and that’s what I try to do with all my characters,” Baldacci says. “In this story, people will learn a lot more about the dynamic between Robie, Reel and Blue Man and how strong their ties really are.”

The setting of the book is in a small remote Colorado town, and the author picked it because he has some family in the state and feels the area has some nice elements to it—such as being vast and wide open—that dovetailed nicely with the plot.

“The book opens with alternating chapters, three chapters with Robie and three chapters with Reel, and these two characters are doing what they do—incredibly dangerous things and coming away from those experiences a little bit changed,” Baldacci says. “I want people to know that while they are doing all these action-packed events, they are still human beings and trying to process it all.”

Baldacci spent about six months on the project and he says it was one of the easiest writings of his career, and the initial copy came out closer to the finished product than ever before.

When writing, Baldacci finds solitude at his office in Reston, where he has a team who takes care of all the minutia that goes with being a published author, allowing him time to do what he does best.

“When I am in town, I get to the office every day and I do a lot of writing, editing and research here, keeping sort of a buffer from my house, which my wife and I decided a long time ago,” he says. “But I don’t have a perfect place to write. I can write anywhere.”

When he writes, he doesn’t set artificial goals for himself as to the number of hours or pages he needs to complete; he just sits down to write until he can’t write anymore.

“I’m not going to sit and stare at a blank screen because that’s counterproductive to me,” he says. “I’ll go take a walk or do something else or daydream and the issues usually resolve themselves.”

One thing that may surprise people is that when Baldacci sits down to start a new project, he doesn’t know much about his characters yet and has no idea how his stories will end.

“I don’t outline them, as I always felt that if I did, it would read like I wrote from an outline. This is a spontaneous, creative business and sometimes you should zag instead of zig, so writing freehand allows you that flexibility,” he says. “I never know the ending of a novel until I get very near that point. I might have seven different endings and I work hard to find the right one. I feel that if I surprise myself, then I’m going to shock the reader, and that’s not a bad thing.”

Up next for Baldacci will be a new Amos Decker book, and he’s not sure what comes after that, though he hints it could be a new standalone or he could explore another of his favorite recurring characters.

“It’s all about who’s been weighing on my mind lately and who do I think has more fuel in the tank,” he says. “Or I could be walking down the street and something strikes me about one of my characters and I think about whether I want to spend the next few months of my life writing about them. I just never know.”

Baldacci is happy that Vienna has a new independent book store in Bards Alley and hopes that more shops like this pop up across the country.

“It’s just great to see people buying books and local communities supporting it,” he says. “I’ve always said if we had more people that read, we’d have a far better world.”

Cracking the Diamond Code

A diamond may last forever, but it doesn’t have to take forever to create.

With Valentine’s Day just around the corner, many people’s thoughts turn to love—and what says love more than a diamond? Naturally, you might think of an engagement ring on this special holiday, but diamond earrings, diamond studs, and pendants are also exceptional gifts of love.

While most opt for a natural diamond for their engagement ring, many others are looking at the new technology of cultured diamonds to make a bigger fashion statement. Whether you call them man-made, cultured, or lab-grown, they are all the same thing: created diamonds containing the same properties of mined diamonds including flaws, color characteristics and industry grading.

And anyone comparing a natural diamond to a lab-grown one will not be able to tell the difference. These are not cubic zirconias or rhinestones—they are in every way, real diamonds.

“What has taken billions of years in nature can now be done in a lab in a couple of weeks,” explained Ronnie Mervis, CEO of Mervis Diamond Importers, the first retailer to carry lab-grown diamonds in our area, and one of the few on the East Coast.

“Natural diamonds started life as a bubble of carbon gas, years ago when the earth was formed. They hardened due to the combination of great time, pressure and heat to become a diamond crystal.

“But cultured diamonds are still diamonds.” A great example, he explained, is that in a pond, water will freeze and turn to ice naturally. You can also create ice yourself in your own freezer. Both are the same, using exactly the same process, whether it’s done outdoors or indoors.

“As diamond importers, we’re firm believers in the old-fashioned, natural way of creating diamonds because we see the diamond as a symbol of love which is meant to be natural,” he continued. “However, sometimes people want things in a new way—it’s a changing world and we’re getting a fair amount of demand for lab-grown diamonds.”

Some people request a diamond that did not come from the earth or create related environmental and ethical issues, and others want a larger diamond than they can afford. Lab-grown diamonds cost less. For the same money, you can get a diamond that is 20% larger. Best of all, they’re made in America, created locally in Maryland.

The History of Lab-Grown Diamonds

“The first efforts to create diamonds were done post-WWII by people basically imitating the natural conditions expected where diamonds are found, using high pressure and high temperature to create a diamond from graphite,” explained the chief technology officer at the diamond lab (which prefers to remain anonymous for security reasons). “This was the initial success that created polycrystalline diamonds mainly used for cutting, like through stone or concrete.” Then people started looking for ways to grow larger diamonds less expensively in a more predictable way.

The successful method of growing diamonds by chemical vapor deposition was developed in the 1970s in Russia and Germany, and allowed the growth of polycrystalline diamond deposits in layers in a controlled environment. Then by the early 2000s, research performed in the Carnegie Institution of Washington led to the capability to grow diamonds of a significant size. Yet it wasn’t until 2008 that the industry was commercialized, and 2013 when they were first made available in retail stores, starting on the West Coast and just now coming east.

How a Lab-Grown Diamond is Created

Lab-grown diamonds begin with what is called a “seed,” a small mined diamond crystal. These seeds are placed into a chamber in batches. The air is removed and hydrogen and methane are added, along with microwave energy, in a chemical process called chemical vapor deposition. Said simply, when the gases absorb the energy, they become energized and create plasma that is very reactive.

The reactivity of the ions and molecules is translated into a reaction between it and the surface of the solid diamond seed and bonding occurs, which extends the size of the original crystal with the additional molecules. In all, the growth process can take up to two months, depending on the desired size of the cultured diamond.

It has taken man decades of research and development and hundreds of millions of dollars to advance this process to a point where the diamonds are now available in the same quality and color as mined diamonds.

The highest and rarest color grade for a natural diamond is D, with the scale running from D to Z. With the cultured process, a good range of the color and clarity can be predicted. The optical properties of a lab-grown diamond are D to M, and it can be harder and tougher than a diamond from the mines.

This particular lab produces round gemstones up to six carat weight, and cushion, pear or emerald-shaped diamonds up to 8 carats. They also cut the rough diamonds, certify them through an independent lab using the International Gemological Institute (IGI), and present them to the market as loose finished gemstones.

“As diamond specialists, we’re glad to be able to now offer diamonds in three ways: through our regular sources, by means of our new partnerships with De Beers with diamonds from their mines, and now with cultured, lab-grown diamonds,” Mervis said.

“We are in the business of making people happy—we’re all about love—so if lab-grown diamonds are what they want, we’re here to offer them.”

WellMedica would like to introduce the latest technology in non-surgical vaginal rejuvenation. It is called the Geneveve—and it is a clinically proven treatment that is revolutionizing feminine wellness as we know it. Currently it is used in 52 different countries around the world and has benefited thousands of women improving their health and quality of life.

What is the Geneveve?

Excessive stretching of the vaginal muscles is a common occurrence after vaginal birth or due to aging. Therefore, many have sought out different treatment options to help get their bodies back. The Geneveve does all this and more. This treatment uses clinically-proven cryogen-cooled monopolar radiofrequency (CMRF) to uniformly deliver gentle volumetric heating while cooling delicate surface tissue. This unique technology stimulates the body’s natural collagen formation process.

What to expect?

The Geneveve treatment is a comfortable, single-session, 30-minute treatment performed by a trained healthcare professional in an outpatient setting. During the visit, Dr. Dima uses a small treatment tip (about the size of your thumb) which is then inserted into the vaginal opening. The tip is then rotated while it alternately cools the surface and heats the soft tissue beneath. Women typically begin to feel the results at about 30 days and the full effect at about 90 days. Depending on how you respond, we may recommend a touch up treatment every year or as you see fit.

Is there any downtime?

During this treatment the vaginal tissue swells slightly. It is recommended that patients abstain from intercourse for 48 hours, although resuming other normal activities right after receiving treatment is acceptable. This includes exercise and bathing.

What does the Geneveve treat?

Vaginal tissue ages over time. With age and childbirth, certain symptoms can occur such as vaginal dryness, urinary incontinence, sexual dysfunction, vaginal pain, air passing from the vagina, less satisfaction with intercourse, and increased self-consciousness. All of these symptoms are easily treatable with the Geneveve and we have seen amazing results with our patients and around the world. In fact, 90% of the women who had the procedure in clinical studies, reported significant, sustained tightening, sensation, satisfaction and noticeably reduced bladder incontinence 12 months after treatment!

What makes the Geneveve different?

Traditional invasive surgical procedures are expensive, can have a long and extremely painful recovery time and carry significant risk. Geneveve is non-invasive, painless, discreet, safe and very effective.

A Unique Rejuvenating Facial

The Vampire Facelift and Facial available at Amanda Rose Esthetics won’t make you stay away from sunlight, but it does promise to give you a more youthful, lifted face with improved skin texture, color, and tone. The facelift and facial are available separately or can be combined. Both procedures use your own platelet rich plasma (PRP), which is rich in growth factors, to rejuvenate the cells and boost collagen formation. The facelift is nonsurgical, synthetic and drug free, and requires little to no down time. The facial uses micronneedling or rezerenerating to deliver the PRP into the tissues and create tighter, smoother skin.

Nonsurgical Facelifts

By combining radiofrequency ablative laser and microneedling treatments into its Fractora Treatment, Healthydermis is making advancements in nonsurgical facelifts. Radiofrequency treats fine or deep wrinkles, scars, discolored skin, texture, and blood vessels. The microneedles deliver electrical pulses to tighten skin and reduce wrinkles. By delivering heat energy to the middle and lower levels of the skin, it stimulates collagen production. Although the results of nonsurgical facelift treatments still are not as dramatic as traditional surgical procedures, the new technologies offer cost-effective solutions with little or no down time.

Cold winter weather takes its toll on your skin. Dry air outside as well as heated air inside saps your skin of vital moisture. In addition, cold wind can leave skin chapped and cracked. Taking the chill off with hot showers or baths makes winter skin problems even worse.

According to world-renowned celebrity makeup artist and creator of Gustavo Skincare & Mineral Makeup, Gustavo Mottola, “You need to counteract these effects to keep skin looking youthful and smooth.” He recommends the following tips to reduce chapping, redness and itching and to keep skin healthy all winter long.

1. Wash with Lukewarm Water

Hot showers and baths may feel nice, but they actually strip natural oils from your skin, leaving it dry and irritated. When washing your face and hands, use lukewarm water, and if you can’t bear a tepid shower, then at least keep it brief and move to tip number two as quickly as you can.

2. Seal in Moisture

Replenish your skin’s moisture as soon as possible after you wash. Gustavo recommends applying lotion to damp skin to seal in moisture. “Keep a bottle of lotion near your bath or shower and at every sink, and use it liberally every time you wash,” he says.

3. Choose Moisturizer Carefully

Some moisturizers use petroleum-based ingredients that further dry your skin in the winter months. “Choose a smart formula that has natural and organic nourishing ingredients,” says Gustavo. Also, use an anti-aging serum before moisturizing to boost moisture levels and to help your skin stay hydrated.

4. Protect Your Skin

Wearing sunscreen in the winter is just as important as in the summer. Apply a zinc-oxide- or titanium dioxide-based sunscreen to your face, neck, ears, hands, and any exposed skin. Wearing a hat, scarf, and gloves also protects skin from the sun and cold.

5. Add Some Humidity

Although many of us complain about the humidity in the summer, our skin benefits from added humidity in the winter when indoor heat dries the air. Putting a humidifier in your house, particularly in your bedroom, puts moisture in the air and helps your skin stay hydrated.

6. Work from the Inside Out

Drink plenty of water in the winter to stay hydrated. Hot coffee and tea may be soothing, but the caffeinated versions have a diuretic effect, which can be dehydrating. For a warm drink that will help keep you hydrated, try decaffeinated teas and coffee or hot water with lemon. Eating foods high in water content also helps keep you hydrated.

7. Moisturize While You Sleep

Some skin tends to get drier than others. Thinner skin, such as that on our hands, feet, elbows, and knees, loses moisture faster than that on other areas of the body. Apply a rich cream or lotion to these areas and wear cotton gloves and socks to seal in the moisture while you sleep.

8. Exfoliate

Using an exfoliating mask on your face, hands, and lips will help your skin shed dead cells so moisturizers can penetrate more easily.

High Quality Organic Skincare

Gustavo Mottola developed his 100% natural Gustavo Skincare & Mineral Makeup line using top-grade ingredients that have breakthrough abilities. His products are organic, paraben-free, preservative-free, sulfate-free and contain no petrochemical fillers. They are vegan and have been approved by the American Cancer Society and People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

Packaged in special airless containers that protect the products from contamination and degradation, the product line includes anti-aging treatments, moisturizers, facial masks, acne treatments, cleansers and toners, and mineral makeup. To explore the full product line and purchase products, visit www.GustavoCosmetics.com.
Avoid Toxins, Specifically Allergens and Irritants

“Particularly if you have eczema, dermatitis, psoriasis or very dry skin, you have to avoid allergens and irritants like parabens or phalates that may trigger a flare up. These preservatives are used in all skincare and makeup products except organic or natural product lines,” says Gustavo.

Nourish Your Skin

Make sure you’re getting enough vitamin C and zinc to support the healthy production of collagen and elastin. Also consider an omega-3 supplement or consume more fatty fish and flaxseed to give your skin the building blocks it needs to appear supple and smooth.

Change Your Cleanser

Cleansers can strip natural oils from the skin and leave it dry. “If you normally use a cleanser containing glycolic or salicylic acid, change it in the winter for a more hydrating version that contains moisturizing ingredients,” says Gustavo. “After cleansing, immediately apply a hydrating toner that contains no alcohol, an anti-aging serum and a moisturizer to seal in moisture.”

Chai Tai Smoothie
Serves 2

1 cup (240ml) unsweetened almond milk
1 cup (240ml) raw coconut water
1/4 cup (43g) chopped pitted dates, soaked
1 teaspoon natural vanilla extract
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1/8 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon ground cardamom
Pinch of ground cloves
2 medium-sized frozen sliced bananas
1 cup (125g) ice cubes

Throw all of the ingredients into your blender (including any boosters), and blast on high for 30 to 60 seconds, until smooth and creamy.

I feel, I need, I crave. Those are the prompts on The Blender Girl’s website. You might insert: I feel powerful, I feel tired, I need to detox, I crave something zesty. With any of these prompts, you’ll receive six recipes for smoothies that are simple enough that a twelve-year-old can make them.

“When it came time to develop a website on food,” explains Tess Master, also known as The Blender Girl. “I researched a lot of different things out there. I was looking at my blender and thinking about all the things I could do with it—sauces, smoothies, juices, soups, compotes, dips, condiments, pesto, ice cream—I started researching for about a year, and realized the blender is the single greatest culinary invention, because it levels the playing field in the kitchen. That means anybody with very little skill, and even less time, can make something nourishing.”
Masters is an actor, lifestyle personality and cookbook author. Her goal is to help people better understand and access immune boosting nutrition. Masters’ passion for healthy eating began when she was a teenager growing up in Australia and was diagnosed with Epstein Barr Virus. “I was thirteen, and I got chronic fatigue. At the time, there was not much to do but rest. That wasn’t doing it for me,” says Masters who is a whirlwind of energy and enthusiasm. A naturopath recommended she cut out gluten and dairy from her diet. Removing these categories of food, and focusing on a plant based diet, made her feel better. She saw food as a miracle medicine and decided to try a variety of diets. “I said to my mom, ‘There’s got to be something else we can do?’ Something with food, diet, a natural remedy?

“I tried macrobiotic diet. I followed vegan principles. I did paleo before there was paleo. I was grain free. I really was one of those annoying people who tried a new diet every six months,” explains Masters. One day her father sat her down and said, “We are tired of hearing what you can and cannot have. Food should be fun,” he told her. That statement was a “lightbulb” which led her to embrace flexibility not rigidity, leaving an extreme approach to food behind.

That also led her to the discovery of her favorite appliance, the blender. She has since developed 55 smoothie recipes working with a variety of testers including many children. Masters says she wants each person to be able to recreate these smoothies, “Why do I prescribe ingredients measured in cups? I want to make sure that when you make the recipes yourself at home, you can get a close approximation of what I’m tasting when I make it.”

Having sampled a few of her smoothie recipes, I can attest to their creaminess and intoxicating flavors. Her smoothies are multidimensional, or as she describes it: “An incredible alchemy between ingredients.” I met Masters recently at the Four Seasons Hotel in Washington DC, where she had developed The Spa Dining Menu; the hotel also offers Master’s smoothies, like Mystical Mango Smoothie, on their breakfast menu.

Maybe you’ve made smoothies at home, but Masters’ smoothies are different. She described some of her techniques that make them both smooth and nutritious. The following is a list of methods to help you expand your repertoire from making only strawberry banana smoothies to smoothies that could change your life.

- First, Masters says, finely chop the fruit or vegetables to get a high-water content. Choose a base, like frozen fruit, oranges, frozen cranberries, orange zest. Maybe you want to use vegetables instead? Vegetables like tomatoes, butternut squash and kale can be both savory or sweet.

- “Smoothies have to be creamy or frosty, not mealy, grainy or so crunchy you have to floss your teeth afterward,” says Masters. “An important factor in the enjoyment of food is texture.” To get frosty and creamy, Masters typically starts with frozen fruit, then adds avocado or nuts and some ice. “Flavored ice is a really good thing,” she states. Take leftover juices, herbal teas or milk, and freeze them. Fruit gives flavor, and milk makes a smoothie creamy.

- Another way to get creamy texture is using raw unsalted cashews, rolled oats, cooked grain, as well as cooked vegetables like pumpkin, butternut squash, carrots, sweet potatoes even frozen zucchini (remove the peel). Dice them up, then freeze, to use later in your smoothie.

- Another tip is to freeze any bitter vegetables like beets and leafy greens. When smoothies are really cold, it decreases the bitterness, and you won’t taste them. She uses frozen cauliflower in her apple pie smoothies.

- Spices and fresh herbs. Masters adds both fresh and dry spices like ginger and turmeric. Many people don’t feel like juicing in the winter. To warm things up, Masters adds fennel, cinnamon, cayenne pepper, chili and salt, because these ingredients have a warm flavor profile, and they enhance the flavor of vegetables.

- Another tip is to freeze any bitter vegetables like beets and leafy greens. When smoothies are really cold, it decreases the bitterness, and you won’t taste them. She uses frozen cauliflower in her apple pie smoothies.

- Add some acid and salt. Masters says she adds a pinch of salt when using vegetables, and squeezing lemon, lime juice or balsamic vinegar to boost the tang as well as decrease bitterness.

Glamping Style
by Julie Holland

Tree houses are not just for kids. A "glamping" treehouse getaway is the perfect escape for friends, families, and couples alike.

Reconnect with nature; take a break from social media (when there's no service, you have no choice!); enjoy a cozy space that speaks to your inner child.

These are the two treehouse getaways that I recently enjoyed:

1) Trillium Treehouse (Linden, VA): This is listed on airbnb and is a legit treehouse, built into a forest, high off the ground, with a whimsical interior. Be prepared to use a porta-potty and do some ladder climbing. Oh, and there's no electricity so enjoy the LED and fairy lights. Be prepared to hold off on Instagramming 'til you leave, because there's little to no service (I actually emailed to ask if there was wifi before I realized there's no electricity haha), but it turned out to be a refreshing factor. It's located near the adorable town of Front Royal, so that adds a fun stop to the trip. If you want to have a movie night, make sure your computer is fully charged before you go, and pick up a DVD from a local redbox.

2) Treehouse on Stilts (Charlottesville, VA): this house is also listed on airbnb and is less of a treehouse and more of a house on stilts. It looks like a cute log cabin inside, with a ladder up to the loft area. It has a regular bathroom, but it's located outside of the house, just around the corner from the door (so no climbing down to the ground). This treehouse has electricity and wifi and is a short drive to downtown Charlottesville.
Here are a few suggestions on what to pack for glamping in style:

Camping shirt to be cheeky, like this t-shirt from Cut From the Heart Clothing, or this "happy glamper" tank from It's Your Day Clothing.

Flannel shirt for looking outdoorsy in style. This one is from American Eagle.

Blanket scarf—wear it around your neck, curl up in it or use it for a picnic blanket. This plaid scarf is from ASOS, and J.Crew has some cozy options.

Felt hat for warmth and looking chic. Urban Outfitters has a nice selection.

Furry boho coat—this one pictured is from Shein.com, and Forever21 has nice choices, too.

Cozy socks—these thigh highs are from Abercrombie & Fitch.

Warm sweater fit for cabin life—Zara has you covered.

Anti-Aging Breakthroughs for 2018

By Ivana Donley
Licensed LME Clinician, Medical Laser Technician at Astoria Laser Clinic & Med Spa

Fractional Pixel and Clear Lift Lasers are the key to turning back the clock. Unlike traditional lasers which use a stamping or scanning technique, these lasers allow the clinician to treat the targeted area with high speed and elegant efficiency.

The fractional pixel pulses are triggered as the treatment tip is rolled across the skin, regardless of the speed at which the hand piece is moved. These modules accurately and consistently deliver a single row of seven pixels per millimeter and it creates thousands of microscopic perforations while leaving the surrounding tissue intact. In more detail, the Pixel laser light passes through patented optics to penetrate the skin with tiny thermal channels. These micro-injury sites begin healing and, as collagen remodels, scars begin to fade, and texture starts to improve.

If you are looking for a shorter downtime, ClearLift is a non-ablative approach to laser skin resurfacing. Clinicians are able to offer patients skin resurfacing treatments that are fast and virtually painless with visible results and no downtime. The innovative technology delivers a controlled dermal wound deep beneath the skin. The outer layer of the skin is left undamaged. All stages of healing and skin repair occur under the intact epidermis. This laser has numerous advantages, fast treatment time, no topical numbing is required and treatments can take as little as 30 minutes. It is virtually painless and patients report a comfortable, skin resurfacing experience. Unlike other laser treatments, patients can immediately return to their daily life style. Variable tip depths can also be used for a combination of work on the same area to customize treatment in problem areas. The tips give providers the levels of flexibility needed to transcend the skin barrier and address a variety of age related skin imperfections. The end result is an optimal outcome for the patient.

Radio-frequency is the most advanced fractional treatment providing anti-aging improvements on skin tone and texture for a more radiant appearance through ablation and skin resurfacing—results guaranteed! Physicians can offer a versatile fractional treatment that can provide non-ablative to minimally ablative results up to 1 mm in depth.

Radio-frequency energy heats the skin in a controlled schema to remodel deep collagen and improve the appearance of the skin.

Radio-frequency can be used in areas that demonstrate fine or deep wrinkles, scars or discolored red and brown skin tone. The most common areas of treatment are the lower eyelid, upper eyelid, smile lines, cheeks, mouth, and neck.

Radio-frequency delivers improvements in the broadest range of symptoms of aging skin including fine lines, deep lines, texture, pigment irregularities, blood vessels, and redness.

Radio-frequency offers improvements for aging skin that would normally require two, three or even four different technologies.

Ablation of the skin promotes skin resurfacing while untreated skin between the pins promotes faster healing of the treatment tissue.

Versatility of parameters allows the user to vary the depth of ablation, coagulation, and heating.

The treatment delivers radio-frequency energy to the skin through an array of pins producing localized heat and small micro-lesion dots in the treatment area. The gentle heat generated by the radio-frequency pins in the sub-dermal tissue promotes collagen restructuring for skin rejuvenation and an improved appearance in the skin. The methodical scattering of micro-lesions allows the skin to heal faster than if the entire area was ablated. Active phagocytosis indicates healing at five days post treatment and new restructured collagen is observed in the deep dermis.

The Top 4 Apps for Staying in Shape
By Emma Blancovich

With the world today having so many apps, how can someone ever know which ones are actually worth the download? It is important to keep up a healthy and fit lifestyle and thankfully today’s apps help us get there, so I have looked into the best 4 apps for keeping a fit lifestyle and they are listed below in no order. Whether you are a runner, a yogi, or someone working on strength training, there are apps out there for you to use to help you achieve the lifestyle you want.

Each app below focuses on a different aspect of living a fit and healthy lifestyle and are definitely worth the download; some are free and some cost money, but it is up to you which one would benefit you the most. I know that for me I can never beat the traffic in the DMV with enough time to make it to the gym in the evenings, so paying for apps to help keep me in line with my workouts works just fine for me. There are plenty of great free apps too; some are listed below:

THE SECONDS PRO INTERVAL TIMER

The Seconds Pro Interval Timer is a great app for making up your own routines and being your own personal trainer. If you already have a routine that you like and sets of the exercises you know you like to do, but cannot afford a trainer or simply do not have the time to get to a gym, then this app is ideal for you. You create your workout routines and it times all your workout schedules out for you. It is priced at $4.99. www.intervaltimer.com

PEAR SPORTS APP

PEAR is an app that turns your fitness data into your personal coach! If you do not happen to know the slightest thing about how to set up a workout or need to have a physical trainer in front of you to actually get a workout done, this app comes packed with trainers, some even professionally known, that will coach you throughout the hardest of fitness routines. You also can choose fitness routines ranging from cycling to running and boot camps. This app is priced at $5.99. www.pearsports.com
Runtastic Results

Runtastic Results is free and actually a great app for beginners who want to learn the best and fastest ways to gain muscle. You tell the app what your specific goals are and it generates a strength-training program that is geared specifically to helping you achieve your goals within a set time frame. It also has videos that show you what each strength training exercise looks like, to ensure you do not pull a muscle by doing one incorrectly. www.runtastic.com/en/results

Adidas All Day

The Adidas All Day fitness app is a good one because, not only is it free, but it has you log in your workout sessions and sleep, so that it can help keep you mentally fit as well. Working out can be draining, so this app sends you meditations and specific types of yoga that you can do to incorporate with your workout sessions during the week as well. www.adidas.com/us/allday

Particularly Fabulous

BEAUTY MUST-HAVES

By Marta Bota

When it comes to looking gorgeous from head to toe these must have products will help you do the trick! Here are some of my personal favorites!

HAIR

STYLING PRODUCTS In order to keep your tresses looking shiny and sleek, in any weather, try Humidity Rx Anti-Frizz Weatherproof Spray by ColorProof! It won’t tamper with your hair color if you dye it and helps you maintain your style all day long, even in humid climates! This lightweight spray locks in your style while locking out humidity and doesn’t feel stiff or sticky!

ROOT COVER For perfect color every single day use COLOR WOW Root Cover Up! This amazing hair "makeup" camouflages roots in between color. It covers grey instantly and dark regrowth on lightened or highlighted hair! This pigmented hair powder is light reflective and looks so natural. It has staying power so it won’t come off until your next shampoo! It also works really well if your hair is thinning. Dab some on your scalp at your part and hairline and voila, your hair instantly looks fuller!

When it comes to looking gorgeous from head to toe these must have products will help you do the trick! Here are some of my personal favorites!
FACE

SUNSCREEN I can't stress enough how important it is to use sunscreen daily all year round! A great sunscreen with the added benefit of a moisturizer is Murad Essential-C Day Moisturize Broad Spectrum SPF 30 PA+++! This product packs a powerful punch! It protects, moisturizes, and nourishes the skin with the skin brightening ingredient of Vitamin C!

CONCEALER If I'm ever stuck on a deserted island the ONE ESSENTIAL I would want to have with me at all times would be my concealer! My all-time absolute FAVORITE winner, hands down, is Cle De Peau Beaute Concealer Broad Spectrum 25! This concealer delivers long lasting, full coverage! It corrects dark pigmentation, under eye circles, imperfections, and uneven skin tones. It's very concentrated so a little goes a long way, as it gives a seamless finish without looking or feeling heavy! I love the extra benefit of sun protection!

BROWS Full, beautifully groomed eyebrows are a growing trend that's not going away any time soon! The great news is that, even if you don't have great brows to start with, there are so many amazing products to create a beautiful brow! Anastasia Beverly Hills are known for all their great brow grooming products from pencils to gels, to stencil kits, and more! There is such a wide variety of textures and color choices in their products that you just can't go wrong!

BODY

We tend to focus more on taking care of our face than our body. Most women neglect delicate areas that are sure to show damage when not cared for. The neck and décolletage, as well as the hands are often overlooked and will give away your age immediately! A little TLC will go a long way! Merle Norman Brilliant C skin care line has a wonderful cream for the neck and décolletage, and PLEASE remember to use sunscreen on these areas daily! Prevention is just as important as upkeep!

For hands I love The Body Shop Almond Milk & Honey Calming & Protecting Hand Cream! It's infused with real honey and almond oil and is just what your hands need to keep them happy through the harsh winter months! I love to slather some on my feet before bed to keep my feet silky smooth too!
Name and occupation.

What is your biggest beauty splurge that you deem necessary?
That would probably be maintaining my hair. I’ve gone to Fery at Dolce Vita Salon at the Galleria for the last 10+ years and am very happy with her. She’s always updated on the latest techniques and is the nicest person you’d want to meet.

What is the beauty product will you would not leave the house without?
That would probably be mascara and some face powder and blush. You never know where the day will take you.

What is your workout pick?
I’m a big yoga fan, that, and lifting weights. I’ve put together a great Spotify playlist for the gym that keeps me going.

What is your view on diet?
I try eating non-processed foods as much as possible and am cooking a lot more these days. I enjoy vegetables and try keeping everything in moderation.

Client Success Story

“Fitness Together has been a huge influence in my life. I was pretty much a couch potato at age 55 and I said to myself, “you know, you need to change your life!” Now for the past almost-four years, twice per week I’m here at 6:00 in the morning. There's no way I'm not going to be here. I've lost 30 pounds. Quit smoking. I actually run in the trails now. It's been...huge. The relationship with the trainers becomes a really personalized one—you really get to know each other. It's a wonderful place. They'll do the job. And you need it!”

- Mike Terry

Client Success Story

“I think one of the things that I like best about Fitness Together is that I can work one-on-one with a trainer who really is knowledgeable about what I can do. That’s what we’ve always focused on here—what I can do instead of what I can’t do. I’ve been coming now for 5 years. I started with a debilitating back injury; and I started working with the trainers here who have helped me on this journey… I not only lost 30 pounds which was a bonus; but I’m in the best physical shape that I’ve been in—ever. And I feel great. It has been the best investment that I’ve ever made in my health and fitness.”

Over 100 attendees enjoyed passed hors d’oeuvres and beverages during Dr. George Weston’s and Dr. Robert Sigal's educational presentation. The presentation detailed the remarkable patient studies and transformations that the surgeons at Austin-Weston are able to achieve. The before and after photos were a true testament to the natural-looking results the doctors strive to attain. "You don't want to look different, you want to look like yourself—just younger," said Dr. Sigal. Once patients are committed to go through with the surgery, the doctors come up with the highly personalized plan. If it is a facelift, they address the face as a whole, as they commented that nothing looks worse or more unnatural than doing just half your face.

With their combined 75 years of experience in the very select niche of cosmetic plastic surgery, Dr. Weston, Dr. Sigal, Dr. Byron Poindexter and Dr. Christopher Knotts are experts in their field due to the hundreds of cases they perform over the course of one year. "When you choose a plastic surgeon, you don't want a doctor that has done the procedure a few times before—you want a doctor that has done the procedure hundreds of times before," said Dr. Weston. And in their case, they have done the procedures so repetitively that they have perfected their craft to a higher level of refinement than other cosmetic surgeons.

If you have an interest in attending their next open house or would like a complimentary consultation, you can visit www.austin-weston.com or call (703) 893-6168.
Winter is a great time to spend with your family, indoors and outdoors, with snow or without snow. People think of summer as being the perfect time to enjoy family since the kids are out of school and you can do more outside, but there is plenty to do when the air is chilly and the fire is warm. Try some of these suggestions this year, and enjoy what our area has to offer.

Lace Up the Skates
An old favorite, but nonetheless still a favorite. Ice skating brings out the child in all of us and is a perfect activity for kids too. Grab some skates, throw on your coat and scarf, and test your balance. The kids will love gliding and sliding around with their parents; they'll have a great time outside and seeing everyone together. Need some suggestions? Try Pentagon Row in Arlington, Fairfax Ice Arena in Fairfax, or Mount Vernon Rec Center in Alexandria. There are many others too!

Roll the Dice
Too cold outside? Maybe it's snowing and you want to stay in. Well then, turn that TV off and break out the games! There are so many varieties these days that you can get the whole family involved, even the dog or goldfish. Games are a fun way to test your trivia, acting, artistic, and even strategic skills. There are also games that are educational for kids, and adults too. Don't have any games? Visit Child's Play in McLean, or go to the many shops in the Tysons Corner Center that have a plethora to choose from.

Drama vs. Comedy
Nothing works better for interaction than acting. With all of the local theatres and schools in our area, there is a never-ending stream of fabulous plays and shows. You can go out and watch these productions but don't forget that you can also get involved. Check with your local schools and get you and your kids involved, or visit places like 1st Stage Theater in McLean, or Jammin' Java and Wolf Trap in Vienna, and enjoy their performances all year long.

Sports with a Roof
Does your family love to play sports during the summer? It doesn't have to stop with the season, continue that fun during the winter. Many local places offer indoor activities such as tennis, swimming, soccer, rock climbing, basketball, you name it! Splash around in the pool with your kids, teach them how to play tennis, climb up a rock wall with them, they'll love being able to get out and be active with their parents! Visit one of the many gyms in the area, or the Spring Hill Rec Center in McLean, they even have a Wallyball court!

Hit the Slopes
Grab your gear and head to the mountains! Skiing and snowboarding is a great all-around activity that everyone in the family will enjoy, even the little ones. Many mountains also offer tubing, which will bring the adrenalin junkie out of you. Not a fan of skiing? You and the kids can still enjoy the slopes by hiking, snowshoeing, sledding, or savoring a hot cup of cocoa by the fire. With several options around Virginia, you'll have an impressive list to choose from for a fun getaway.

Take in Nature
Even though we live in a metropolitan area, there is still plenty of open space to enjoy. Great effort has been made to preserve our forests and land so get out there and go for a nature walk, breathe in the crisp air, listen to the wildlife hustle and bustle, and enjoy the quiet. The forests are a very different ecosystem during the winter, and are just as wonderful as the summertime. Teach your kids about our forests and how important they really are to us; they'll appreciate every minute.

Learn Something
Enhance your nature walks by enjoying time at the many nature centers and conservancies around us. The kids will be fascinated by the animals they can interact with, and they will love the exhibits that have been painstakingly put together by the centers. You may also pick up a few little tidbits that you never knew before; the interaction and education will be enjoyed by all in the family. Stop by the Jerome Buddie Ford Nature Center in Alexandria and Gulf Branch Nature Center in Arlington and see what they have to offer.

Robert Brooks and Julie Griffith had occupied their 2,800 sq ft Colonial in McLean for over 20 years. In time, the house had proved an ideal place to raise a family, but as the two children grew, it had gradually come to seem inadequate. Recognizing that the good local schools and easy commute to work would be hard to replace, the couple had decided against shopping for a larger residence further out. Enlarging the existing house was a consideration, but what plan would work?

There was much about the existing house that called for improvement. The kitchen was small, dark and dated. The original U-shaped kitchen counter, which incorporated the range oven and the sink, made it difficult for the cook to move freely into other rooms when entertaining. Storage was limited. Circulation between the kitchen and other first level rooms often caused traffic jams.

Upstairs, the master bathroom was too small; floor space in a teen daughter’s bedroom was hardly large enough to accommodate a work station.

A first floor laundry room behind the garage was vexingly inconvenient for two time-pressed working parents. A powder room just outside the family room was, likewise, in the wrong place.

All of these factors taken into account, an addition on the rear elevation seemed to offer a practical space expansion plan.

But the bigger question was: what scope of changes would the family budget allow, and how could such a long list of desired modifications best be integrated into a whole greater than the sum of the parts?

As the unanswered questions accumulated, Sonny Nazemian, chairman and founder of Michael Nash Kitchens and Homes, entered the scene.

“Several design strategies appeared applicable from the start,” Nazemian reflects. “A solution that integrates newly-built square footage with a thoughtful reconfiguration of interior space can offer a significant lifestyle enhancement. As remodelers, we look for an architectural context that will allow us..."
to re-deploy out-of-date floorplan features while introducing an alternative that better accommodates individual requirements and the family’s social needs. We have found there’s very broad interest in this approach to remodeling—especially in the close-in neighborhoods.”

Taken as a whole, the Brooks-Griffith program called for two separate additions on the rear of the house. The new construction would be integrated into a whole house remodel that would include a new front facade and new siding on the entire exterior.

A 12’ x 24’ two-level addition in the middle of the rear elevation would house a first floor kitchen/family room suite integrated with the existing kitchen’s footprint as well as a second level master bedroom suite with spa bath and walk-in closets.

Meanwhile, a smaller (8’ x 24’) one level hyphen linking the garage and kitchen was designed to accommodate a mudroom and added storage as well as a new powder room.

A small grilling deck accessible from the kitchen segues to a screen porch built on a side elevation. The porch is also linked to the formal dining room via a side door.

In short, a perfect platform for fair weather entertaining.

To better integrate the two-level addition into the existing house, a 22-foot section of bearing wall was removed on the rear elevation. A structural beam flush with the existing perimeter and mounted on vertical I-beams now provides support for the second floor. The solution offers a seamless interface between the home’s new and old sections.

“The structural solution invites an open, transitional-style interior design,” Nazemian observes. “Sight lines are extended and the square footage is enlarged dramatically, yet formal design elements define activity zones that are functionally self-contained.”

The first level plan, moreover, allocates square footage needed for both an expansive L-shaped gourmet kitchen and a butler’s pantry between kitchen and new formal dining room.

The food prep island is visual linked to the hearth in the front-facing family room. Large kitchen windows and double French doors, likewise, invite abundant natural light in all directions. French doors open into the spacious back yard, offering a comfortable indoor/outdoor component.

To augment first level visual continuum, the wall between family room and kitchen was replaced with a large food preparation island and dining counter.

Equipped with a sink, dishwasher and glass-facing display cabinets, the marble-surfaced island dominates the open space. Overhead, two glass and chrome chandeliers balance the composition.
A small refrigerator built into the island faces into the breakfast room; from the family room side, the built-in affords easy access to TV and media equipment. The island also offers stool seating for four, and buffet-style counter space.

Despite its many amenities and functional work triangles, the kitchen/great room abounds in interactive gathering zones well-suited for entertaining.

White cabinetry and soft marble surfaces present a bright lively finish. Soft subway tiles and blue-tint glass tile recede softly into a French country ambiance.

Naturally-stained wood floors installed throughout the entire first floor reinforce an uplifting interior style.

Upstairs, extensive modifications provide sweeping lifestyle benefits.

There’s a larger master bedroom suite with a 130 square foot walk-in closet.

The new 230 square foot master bathroom boasts a whirlpool tub with a view of the back yard, a large marble shower stall, a double vanity, marble floors and lots of storage capacity.

Linen cabinets and a walk-in closet with small windows located just outside the new bathroom provide ample wardrobe space.

For added convenience: the second floor bathroom has been converted into new laundry room—an easy reach from bedrooms, bathroom and closets.

The teenage daughter’s room has been enhanced by an 8’x8’ sleeping alcove built over the screened porch, a modification that provides the square footage needed for a larger work station and a walk-in closet.

At the front of the house, the formerly cramped front foyer has been tastefully refurbished. Multi-color wood flooring in a basket weave pattern lends definition. The archway into the living room—widen by ten feet—makes the foyer seem substantially larger. Pocket French doors surrounded by built-in bookcases have been installed between foyer and living room adding both function and elegance.
Distinctive finishwork touches are everywhere. There's crown molding throughout the first and second floors; shadow boxing in the dining room, hallway and stairway; wood flooring in the master bedroom and closet; new carpeting on the rest of the second floor among many upgrades.

Outside, old siding has been replaced with Hardie plank, trim, and fascia board; windows, gutters, roof and downspouts are also new.

New exterior windows in varied shapes and sizes combined with angular corners in selected roof lines enhance curb appeal.

The front door is now framed by an arched portico with square columns; a new flagstone walkway links the front door to the driveway.

“As remodelers, we are particularly pleased when we can find budget-sensitive ways to help owners stay in a neighborhood where they’ve established their roots as a family,” Nazemian says. “In this case, we’ve enhanced the charm of the original house—but it is much more functional and presentable. That’s the outcome we seek.”

While January is often thought of as a time of renewal, it can also represent a fresh start—in more ways than one.

Come the early part of the year, homeowners are getting restless. They’re thinking about putting their homes on the spring market and relocating or downsizing. They’re tired of being cooped up all winter with all their stuff, and they’re beginning to embrace the trend of rightsizing, the new term that defines reducing the amount of stuff you have so you can focus more on living in the moment.

“Businesses right-size when they have too much fat. They sell assets or hold layoffs. Homeowners right-size to get the clutter out of their lives so they can live a more meaningful life, spend time with family and friends, focus on hobbies and take priority over material things,” explained Collin Wheeler, president of 123JUNK.

We’re seeing a trend toward smaller living, whether it’s because we’re retiring and moving to a smaller home that offers more options for aging in place, jumping on board with the tiny house trend, or simply wanting to spend more on experiences than objects. Simplify is the word for 2018.

The first step in simplifying is to clear out anything from your home that is unwanted, unneeded or unused. But don’t consider these items worthless. There are plenty of people in our own community who can really use them. Instead of tossing them out, take advantage of the many ways to donate them.

123JUNK: Thought Leaders in Repurposing

As thought leaders in the local junk removal community, 123JUNK was the first company to put emphasis on repurposing items. “When I researched starting my business, I noticed that most hauling companies took everything to the dump and drove away, leaving the stuff in the landfill or on the ground,” Wheeler explained. “I took on a more ‘social responsibility’ approach than an environmental one as the core of my business model.”

Wheeler recalled his own experience when upgrading from his college-days hand-me-down dishware, pots and pans. Loading several boxes of his old items into his car, he took them up to a local charity—which only accepted about a quarter of what he brought. “I was disappointed. I clearly thought my items were more valuable than they did,” he said. “Having worked now to bring donations to a number of charities, I know that others can and do benefit from the items we deliver.” Wheeler hand-picks the charitable partners he knows can benefit most.
More than half of what 123JUNK currently picks up from homeowners in either charity donations or hauling jobs is repurposable, and crews make the extra effort to cull these items from every pickup. “We give charities a richer quality of items than they get from anywhere else, and have become their #1 donor in most cases, with pickups seven days a week. This is the ‘why we do what we do,’” Wheeler emphasized.

What you may think of as junk may be a lifesaver to someone who has little. Here are just a couple of examples of how items you no longer need or want can help your own community.

No One Left Behind: Replenishing Families

There are Afghani and Iraqi citizens who put their lives on the line every day to act as combat interpreters and cultural advisers to U.S. troops stationed in their countries. The U.S. government made a moral commitment to these allies that if their safety, or that of their families, was ever threatened by the Taliban or ISIS, the U.S. government would step in to assist them in obtaining Special Immigrant Visas (SIVs) and help them resettle to the United States and get a job, housing and cultural adaptation assistance. In most cases, these families arrive in the U.S. with nothing.

No One Left Behind’s (NOLB) mission is to support these allies who have been displaced from their homes. “Every Saturday, we take a volunteer crew to the 60 dumpsters where 123JUNK places their donated items, load items into our trucks, and drive them directly to the Afghan communities in Alexandria, Woodbridge and Hyattsville to help furnish the homes of the new arrivals,” described Keith Saddler, DC Chapter president.

Everything these families receive is donated, either through 123JUNK, the Realtor community or faith-based organizations. “Picture yourself arriving to an unfurnished apartment. It’s not just furniture you want. Even the smallest items like cleaning supplies, silverware, toiletries or diapers are greatly needed and appreciated,” Saddler emphasized. NOLB has supported more than 500 families in the DC Metro area to date, and more continue to arrive.

Loudoun Habitat ReStore: Building Affordable Housing

Other charities benefit from your donations as well, like Loudoun Habitat Restore. Selling donated items in their retail store raises the money needed to support the housing ministry, Habitat for Humanity International, on a local front and help build affordable housing in partnership with people in need.

“There are families and singles in Loudoun County who work here but can’t afford to live here, so our job is to try to get them into a livable home,” explained Therese Cashen, Loudoun ReStore manager. “With your donations, we can fund affordable housing for Loudoun residents.”

From 123JUNK’s pickup locations, the charities can choose the items that best serve their own organizations. If you have a variety of items to downsize, are looking to make a charitable donation, or simply want to start living a more “right-sized life,” schedule a pickup with 123JUNK, or take your items to one of the organizations that actually funnel the goods or money raised from them back into your own community. As the adage goes, one man’s junk truly is another man’s treasure.”

Fires were not a rarity. It was soon realized that the area's fire protection was not sufficient and there was a need for an organized fire department to service the new village. At this time, McLean had to rely upon assistance from stations in Falls Church, Arlington, or the District of Columbia. Volunteer fire fighters began meeting in Storm's Store about 1916. These early meetings resulted in the formation of the McLean Community Fire Association, which reorganized in 1922 and changed its name to the McLean Volunteer Fire Department. The MVFD incorporated in 1923. This was the first charter of its kind in Fairfax County and, so, the MVFD was designated “Company 1.”

On September 4, 1924, James and Maude Beatty conveyed 1/6 of an acre of their property along Chain Bridge Road at Cedar Street (today Redmond Drive) for a firehouse. The deed included a proviso that the property would always be used to support a volunteer fire department. A two-bay cinder-block station was completed in 1925 at a cost of $5000. There were 25 members of the MVFD at that time. All of the members, along with others in the community, donated their time and labor as needed in constructing the station. By this time a General Motors gasoline-powered one-ton truck had been purchased, along with four 20-gallon chemical tanks from the Buffalo Chemical Fire Extinguisher Company. Three of these tanks were installed on the truck. McLean was now able to provide some means of fire protection for its citizens: it had a firehouse, a fire truck, and four chemical tanks.

Women wanted to be a part of this new endeavor and support the men in their firefighting activities. They wasted no time, and in 1925 formed the Ladies Auxiliary in order to help with fundraising and provide refreshments for the firefighters during emergencies. The firehouse became a gathering place for residents. The volunteer firemen and Ladies Auxiliary brought spirit to the community. There were parades and picnics; holidays were celebrated. A cedar tree at Chain Bridge Road and Cedar Street served as a community Christmas tree. The firemen and Ladies Auxiliary, in keeping with the spirit of the season, decorated it every year.

The MVFD took over the operations of the McLean Day celebration in 1926 as a way to raise additional funds. The name of the event was changed to the McLean Carnival and it became a three-day affair rather than just one. It continued to be held at the Civic League Lot adjacent to the Franklin Sherman School. As the enrollment at the school increased, the firemen thought that it was essential for the students to have a fire escape in case of an emergency. A tubular escape was installed in 1927 on the outside of the southeast side of the building that led from a second story exit to the ground below. Of course, the escape was the focal point of the numerous fire drills over the years, but it was mainly used as a “theme park attraction” by area youth when school was not in session.

Since water is not always easily available when fighting fires in rural areas, an underground concrete cistern was constructed in front of the firehouse in 1926 from which a pumper could be kept fully filled. The cistern was built to hold 28,000 gallons of water at a cost of $400.00. That cistern remains today.
The MVFD had to keep up with the village of McLean as it developed. More firefighting equipment and vehicles were purchased and needed to be stored. Thus, in 1932, just seven years after the cinder-block firehouse was built, a large two-story red-brick attachment was added to the rear of the original two-bay station. The cost of the addition was kept down because most of the materials were donated and the labor was provided by volunteers. When completed, vehicles and equipment were kept on the lower level, but the upper level was used for community activities such as meetings, dinners, and fundraising events. Thus, Station Number 1 turned into McLean’s community center.

In 1935, a custom built fire truck pumper was purchased from Peter Pirsch and Sons. The Pirsch pumper was able to carry 500 gallons of water. But the volunteer firemen were now doing more than simply putting out fires: they were also providing life-saving emergency service. All the firemen were given instructions in first aid. A Rescue Squad was established in 1935. The Ladies Auxiliary was the driving force in raising money to help purchase a 1931 Cadillac sedan, which was converted into Fairfax County’s first ambulance.

The MVFD continued to require more space and, so in 1939, the firemen talked with the Beatties requesting to purchase an additional small portion of their property. This was a narrow strip of land amounting to 540 square feet that lay adjacent to the firehouse on its west side. The Beatties were supportive and the sale was completed in September of 1940.

Because of McLean’s proximity to Washington, World War II brought an increase in activity at the station in the form of volunteer airplane spotters. The area was on “high alert” due to the 1941 Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor. In 1942 a four-sided cupola was added to the roof of the original two-bay station for volunteers to search for enemy aircraft that might fly overhead. These spotters consisted of men, women, and youth who resided in the McLean area. There were at least two persons in the observation tower at all times. They took shifts, were given binoculars, and kept a log book so that they could record every plane they observed.

The McLean area and MVFD continued to grow. In June of 1944, the MVFD acquired an additional 13,740 square feet of adjacent property from the Beatties in order to further expand the firehouse. At this time the Beatties granted the release of the 1924 encumbrance stating that the land could only be used for volunteer firefighting purposes. But it wasn’t until 1947 that the original two-bay cinder block structure was taken down and replaced with a one-story brick structure with four bays facing Chain Bridge Road. A meeting area, office space, and a kitchen were included in the new building and the 1932 addition remained. A hose tower was later added on the west side of the station.

Since the population was rapidly increasing throughout Fairfax County, the MVFD began to shift from an all-volunteer fire and rescue organization to an all-career department. McLean’s Sam Redmond was the first to be hired as a full-time career firefighter in the county. He was assigned to Company 1 and awarded badge number 1. In time, Cedar Street changed its name to Redmond Drive. Blacks and women became a part of the career department as the MVFD turned into a fully paid ‘round the clock staffed station supplemented by trained and dedicated volunteers. McLean was rapidly growing and by the early 1980s residents realized that the 1947 station was outdated and required a significant upgrade.

This led to discussions between the MVFD and Fairfax County concerning a plan for the county to build a new station. An arrangement was eventually reached where the MVFD turned over the existing firehouse to the county to help offset the expense of constructing a new station. Property was purchased nearby at the corner of Laughlin and Whittier Avenues where an 18,000 square foot, four-bay, drive through fire station was built and opened in 1988.

Now, under the ownership of Fairfax County, the older station on Chain Bridge Road was turned over to the McLean Community Center which transformed it into a teen center. McLean resident Al Pierce provided the architectural and interior design services pro bono through his company, Pierce Architecture, and obtained all of the volunteers needed for the required engineering work. The Teen Center’s grand opening took place October 13, 1990. Taking care to retain the firehouse theme, the teens renamed the building “The Old Firehouse.”
“Hello, Welcome!” You hear this uttered dozens of times during the lunch rush at Sapphire Tysons restaurant. News traveled fast between the office towers of Tysons Corner, and after only three weeks, Sapphire Tysons has a steady crowd for their weekday lunch buffet. The restaurant’s team is in constant motion bringing out fresh platters, filling water glasses and delivering hot Naan bread to each table (by request). In the middle of the room sits a gleaming buffet of brightly colored East Asian delicacies.

When groups and office workers go out for lunch, they’re looking for a few key factors. They want fast service, well priced food, a welcoming atmosphere and easy commute. Sapphire Tysons meets those requirements plus a little more. The restaurant excels by serving high-quality food inspired by multiple cultures.

While Sapphire calls their buffet “Indian,” some recipes originated in Nepal, China, and Pakistan. For example, Biryani and Butter Chicken are traditional Mughal dishes. Mughlai is a cooking style from Northern India and parts of Pakistan that is rich with aromatic spices, nuts, and dried fruits. Saffron, cinnamon, cardamom, cloves, and nutmeg are used liberally.

“What we’ve done here is marry the flavors of the East and West, to create fusion cuisine,” says Mazhar Chughatai, co-owner of Sapphire. Working side by side with his wife and partner Tasneem Chughatai, they are eager to expose Tysons diners to new dishes, including a few that are popular in Pakistan. “We bring in chefs from different regions of East Asia,” says Mazhar. “We would like to be a place where these communities come together.”

Sampling the lunch buffet is an ideal way to taste many of your favorite dishes and try some new ones. You may have eaten Tandoori Chicken and smoky Yellow Daal (lentils) before, but perhaps not Goat Curry. The Goat Curry here is robust, fall-off-the-bone mutton, seasoned with onions, garlic and ginger, chilies, curry, and thyme. With the addition of chopped tomatoes and bits of mint, the sauce thickens into a luscious meaty broth after slow cooking for hours.

Vegetarians have several choices including the Chana Masala, chickpeas in a turmeric tomato gravy. Then there’s a mélange of cauliflower, carrots, peppers, and zucchini sauced in coconut and yellow curry. The stewed Cabbage and Peas dish is fragrant with some serious heat. The star of the buffet line is Chili Chicken, an Indo-Chinese dish, and specialty of Sapphire Chef Jahir Islam. Similar to Buffalo sauce, the Chef leans hard on the hottest chili powders, plus soy sauce and tomato, to coat bite-size slices of dark meat chicken in a fiery crimson glaze. The chicken is garnished with slices of green pepper, onions, and jalapenos. You’ll need some Raita, a soothing lemony yogurt sauce on the condiment section, to cool off, but it’s a tantalizing dish you should not miss. Another nod to Chinese cuisine is the divine basmati rice with egg and vegetables.

Butter chicken is a fan favorite according to the servers, and the most ordered dish at Sapphire. Made from leftover Tandoori chicken that was first roasted in a clay oven, it's bathed in the butter, tomato sauce and cream. The sauce is spiced with fenugreek seeds, cinnamon, cloves, onions, garlic, ginger, paprika, and lots of ground turmeric. This is one of the few dishes not packing heat on the menu.

Indian restaurants aren’t often known for their desserts, but Sapphire has a couple of standouts. A perfect end to a scorching meal is the cooling mango soufflé with raspberry drizzle. Chocolate lovers should try the chocolate samosas with vanilla ice cream and fudge topping. The traditional Nepalese dessert called Gulab Jamon is a doughnut ball of milk powder floating in sweet syrup.

For the after-work crowd, Sapphire has a well-stocked bar with five televisions tuned into a variety of sporting events. The bartender says he plans to rotate the eight taps with a variety of local, national and international beers. As of this writing, the lunch buffet is available 11:30 am to 2:30 pm for $11.99. The Currys-N-Hurry program offers guests a quick dish of curry and rice for $9.

Sapphire Tysons has a private room and guest table for groups. A Taj Mahal mural and colorful peacock mural overlook the restaurant, inspiring the blues and golds in the décor. White tablecloths make this restaurant a more formal place than when it was a Bennigan’s. Sapphire Tysons offers the fun fusion of an exotic dining experience in a neighborhood restaurant.

VIVATYSONS.COM JANUARY // FEBRUARY 2018  v  TYSONS
While we're stuck in the dead of winter here in the D.C. area, we've rounded up some of our favorite comfort foods from right here at home, as well as from around the world, to help give you a little meal planning inspiration to get you through this winter. Guten appetit!

Lasagna – While recipes vary from vegetarian to meatball, and white lasagna to classic, you'd be hard pressed to find someone who doesn't love a good lasagna. That's why it is one of Italy's most iconic dishes, and it's not uncommon to find spin-offs of this layered, cheesy pasta dish in many other cuisines!

Pot Roast with Mashed Potatoes and Gravy – There's nothing quite like the combination of pot roast with mashed potatoes and gravy to satisfy the ever comforting “meat and potatoes” craving. Tender and juicy meat, paired with buttery mashed potatoes and savory gravy, and you've got the perfect recipe to remind you of your favorite country kitchen cooking.

Poutine – This Canadian favorite revamps the classic French fries by topping them with cheese curds and brown gravy for a delicious savory dish. It's no wonder variations of this popular dish are commonly being created in sandwiches, flatbreads and more!

Macaroni and Cheese – Nothing says “childhood” like a bowl of creamy macaroni and cheese! Whether you prefer to stick to the classic, or doctor it up with various cheeses or fix-ins (lobster and gouda mac and cheese, anyone?), this is one dish that the adults and kids can always agree on.

Beef Bourguignon – This French favorite features beef braised in flavorful Burgundy wine and beef broth, with garlic, pearl onions and mushrooms to make a hearty beef stew à la Julia Child. Pair it with a glass of red wine and you’ll warm up in no time!

“Oh, the weather outside is frightful, and the fire [FOOD!] is so delightful...” There's no better way to warm up from the bitter cold than old fashioned comfort foods and a taste of home; the types of foods that make you forget about all that is going on in the world, and brings you back to your roots. As my mom, Helga, says, “Es ist gut für dem magen” which means, “it’s good for the stomach.” When my stomach is happy, I am happy!
Glühwein – Glühwein, or German mulled wine, is a delicious classic for the holidays, but great to warm you up anytime! Red wine, spiced with cinnamon, cloves and citrus makes this festive and heartwarming drink a favorite for many.

Keep warm with Helga’s Glühwein!

1 Bottle Red Wine
½ c. water
1 lemon, sliced
1 cinnamon stick
1 Tbsp. ground cloves
1/3 c. sugar

Boil water, lemon, cinnamon stick, cloves and sugar for 5 minutes. Strain. Add red wine and heat, but do not boil. Serve with cinnamon stick for garnish.

Recipe serves 8-10.

Old Fashioned Bread Pudding – When you think of comfort foods, there’s no doubt that bread pudding comes to mind. While there are tons of delicious renditions to this classic dessert, there’s something about a good old-fashioned bread pudding, complete with raisins and hot butter rum sauce, and served with vanilla ice cream that warms the heart (and stomach!).

Chicken Noodle Soup – The quintessential “comfort” meal, chicken noodle soup is good for the body and the soul. That’s why it’s a go-to for cold winter days, or when you’re feeling under the weather, because there’s nothing like mom’s homemade chicken noodle soup to make you feel better!

Goulash – Looking for another spin-off to classic beef stew? This traditional Hungarian dish features meat and vegetables seasoned with paprika and caraway seed to make a flavorful stew, and is often served over egg noodles or potato dumplings, making it a hearty meal for the coldest of days.

Tasty Grass Farm is the first farming business in Marshall, VA, to be certified Grassfed by A Greener World (AGW). This is the only certification and logo in the U.S. and Canada that guarantees food products come from animals fed a 100 percent grass and forage diet, raised outdoors on pasture or range for their entire lives, and managed according to the Certified Animal Welfare Approved by AGW leading welfare and environmental standards on an independent farm. While other grassfed labels exist, none has fully met consumer expectations when it comes to a grassfed and forage diet, environmental management and farm animal welfare—until now.

Tasty Grass Farm sits on 410 acres of well managed pasture and is home to 117 Black Angus cattle. The farm participates in several sustainable environmental protection practices, including extensive riparian buffer zones around streams to keep the cattle from contributing to pollution in the Chesapeake Bay watershed. In addition, the Hauters engage in rotational grazing methods to discourage overgrazing, encourage native flora, and control invasive plant species.

Wayne Hauter of Tasty Grass Farm says, “We chose Certified Animal Welfare Approved by AGW and Certified Grassfed by AGW because we wanted to communicate our high-welfare and grassfed farming practices to customers. Our goal is to have a sustainable farm with excellent soil and animal health, and our cattle live healthy and happy lives eating fresh grasses and drinking pure, clean well water. This is all reflected in the quality and taste of our grassfed beef.”

According to recent research, demand for grassfed beef has increased by 25-30 percent every year over the last decade. But while demand for grassfed meat is sky-rocketing, not all grassfed certifications are meeting consumer expectations—and some continue to permit highly questionable practices. Some meat currently marketed as grassfed could come from animals confined on dirt feedlots for long periods outside the growing season, or where growth hormones and subtherapeutic antibiotics are used—just as long as they were fed cut grass or forage.

AGW’s new Certified Grassfed label is the only grassfed program in North America to guarantee:

- Ruminant animals raised outdoors on pasture for their entire lives, with an entirely grass and forage diet
- Animals raised according to the highest animal welfare and environmental standards in the U.S. and Canada
- High-welfare handling, transport, and slaughter of animals—including an annual review of slaughter facilities

A Greener World Director of Outreach Emily Moose says, “No other grassfed label can match the breadth, integrity, and transparency offered by AGW’s practical and achievable Certified Grassfed standards and certification procedures. We’re proud to support farmers and ranchers like Tasty Grass Farm and to help them promote their high-quality grassfed meat and sustainable farming practices to the public.”

Mid-Century Modern ON THE LAKE

How Sun Design Remodeling helped a growing family get their dream house

Arlington residents Kelly and Michael had long wanted a house on the water in Lake Barcroft, but—after years of looking—couldn’t find anything suitable to their needs. With two young children just starting school, the house of choice had to work for long-term use, perhaps into retirement.

Then, too, they were grappling with Lake Barcroft’s enormous popularity. First developed in the 1950’s, the former farmland had evolved into a community of mostly contemporary homes situated around a 135 acre lake in northern Virginia. Available houses that fit the criteria were few and far between.

Never people to give up easily, however, last year the couple hired design consultant Roger Lataille of Sun Design Remodeling to help them evaluate the possibilities in a circa 1950’s mid-century modern-style home actually situated on the lake.

Lataille had come with a considerable resume, having renovated over 30 Lake Barcroft homes over the last decade. Still, at just over 2,000 square feet, the house at hand was too small for the decades of occupation that lay ahead.

“We wanted a large master suite with a walk-in closet, bedrooms for both kids—and a dedicated guest room,” Kelly recalls. “In addition to our concerns about size, much of the interior seemed dated. Plus, I didn’t have much exposure to this particular architectural style.”

Then again, the waterside view was exceptional, almost one-of-a-kind. Sun Design Remodeling offered an attractive one-stop-shopping approach (as compared to an architect who would have to put plans up for bid), and Lataille was a fountain of inspired ideas that he quickly put on the table.

“They wanted a house that would work long into the future,” Lataille recalls. “I saw the potentials right away, but this is not a solution that any remodeler could execute. This is a sensitive style, so our assignment was partly about adding new usable space, partly about preserving and enhancing a classic style.”

One key component to the new plan: add a third floor for the master suite. This would entail reconciling the existing home’s sloping roof line and introducing a structural solution that would meet code requirements while simultaneously removing lower level walls. Structural solutions are particularly tricky in a house where an open floor plan is to be emphasized.

“It’s a house that begged for bold visual continuum,” Lataille allows “But the existing interior was formed around a noticeably boxy floor plan...with an enclosed kitchen visually sequestered from the beautiful lake view, and a wall between the living room and dining room. The contrast between the old plan and the one we were introducing points to how space-use expectations have changed in the American home in the past 25 years or so.”

Not coincidently, Kelly had also gradually decided that the Colonial-style home the couple had owned in Arlington wasted lots of space. The front-facing living room, for instance, was seldom used; ditto the formal dining room.

“We wanted a plan matched to how we interact as family—and the traditional model hadn’t worked for us,” she says.

Still, the best options for articulating an interior design style were yet to be discovered.

Beginning at the top, a critical challenge was finding the best way to access the proposed master suite from the already space-restricted second floor.

“We needed about eight to ten steps to reach the top floor, but couldn’t continue up the same stairwell,” the designer recalls. “In the end, we reduced a storage closet to gain the square footage needed for an ascending staircase.”

To provide an even, stable platform on top of a sloping roof, Lataille designed an interim infrastructure comprised of truss joists carefully calibrated to meet new load-bearing requirements.

With the location of the master suite now resolved, the second level gains floor space that can be profitably redeployed. One by-product: the main hall was widened by almost two feet, enough to hold a closet designed to house a washer and dryer. The former master bedroom was conveyed to the daughter and thoroughly re-decorated to taste; there's also a dedicated second level guest room.

Upstairs, the master suite boasts a compelling lake view through a twelve foot triple course window wall—but the sleeping quarters are only about a third of the top level floor plan.

To the right of the bedroom, an adjoining walk-in closet provides 200 square feet of custom storage replete with shelves, drawers and closets. To the left, two bathrooms (“His” and “Hers”)—each with their own private entrance—share a separately-accessed walk-in shower finished with mosaic walls and flooring, and a host of deluxe showering amenities.

Meanwhile, in the first level's primary living area the most compelling feature is a steel moment frame which was designed to replace the old window wall, and provide the tensile strength needed to support the upper-level master suite.

By highlighting the elemental drama of woodland, lake and dappled light, the new window wall invites an interior design treatment that explores textural surfaces, period furniture design and contrasting lights and darks.

Overhead, large format structural beams wrapped in walnut-stained pine present a vivid contrast to the white tongue-and-groove ceiling. Waterfall Silestone counter surfaces and hardwood flooring neutralize and counter-balance, yet the mid-century accents of the stools, chairs and even a bright turquoise sectional in the living room present strikingly original intimations of a resurgent American style.

"Morgan Hutchinson (Sun Design's specialty designer) was invaluable in directing the finishwork process," Kelly observes. “For instance, she found a resource for the furniture design that offered period prototypes we could be customize to our requirements. This was a significant breakthrough in shaping the look we wanted.”

Addis Morgan Hutchinson:

“Finding a balance that respected a classic style and accommodated Kelly and Michael's personal tastes was the real nature of the assignment. The design explores unique rustic elements along with a new generation of kitchen innovations. The goal was to make statement that can last, yet be easily adapted.”

Even Dogs Get the Flu

VIP Petcare seeks to keep your pets illness-free this winter

BY LINDA BARRETT

It’s cold and flu season and you’ve taken care to get your own vaccinations, but did you think to do the same for your cat or dog? Just like humans, pets get sick with the flu or respiratory illnesses, especially in the winter months.

Veterinarians see an uptick in sick animals this time of year. Because of the cold weather, pets are kept indoors most of the time where they are exposed to lingering germs. They can also suffer due to wet or moist fur coats.

Some of the most common winter bugs for pets include:

For Dogs

Canine Influenza

The canine flu is a serious and contagious disease that manifests in several strains, the most common being the H3N2 and H3N8. Primarily infecting the respiratory system, its symptoms include a moist cough and nasal discharge in a mild case, and a high fever, malaise and pneumonia indications in a more severe case. Left unattended, it may lead to your pet’s death. Protect your pet with a canine influenza vaccine.

Kennel Cough

The parainfluenza virus causes tracheobronchitis—more commonly known as “kennel cough”—an infection of the windpipe (trachea) and its lower branches (bronchi) that is similar to a cold in dogs. Most dogs get this disease at least once in their lives, and... young puppies and older or pregnant dogs are most at risk.

Kennel Cough, or Bordetella, is commonly picked up through dogs that are kennelled, boarded, or have spent time at the groomer, hence its name. This disease is extremely contagious and can even prove fatal, and appears roughly three to four days after exposure to a number of other dogs. Its symptoms include a dry, persistent cough that can last for weeks or months even after treatment, retching, and a watery nasal discharge. In more severe cases, a dog may show fever, lethargy, lack of appetite, and signs of pneumonia. The Canine parainfluenza vaccine (found inside the 5-in-1 DA2PP) is recommended.

Feline Calcivirus

Feline calcivirus (FCV) is a virus that can cause upper respiratory infection of the nose and throat and oral disease in cats. Its typical symptoms include runny nose and eyes, sneezing, congestion, or conjunctivitis, an inflammation of the eyelid linings. In addition, ulcers of the mouth, tongue, gums, lips or nose are often seen. If your cat has ulcers, it may salivate or drool excessively. More advanced cases can even lead to lameness, especially in kittens.

This disease is highly contagious and generally picked up from secretions from infected cats, such as drool or airborne particles from sneezing, up to three weeks after infection. It can be caught either from direct contact with a sick cat or from objects contaminated by secretions. Symptoms usually appear within two to six days, with the infection itself lasting 14-21 days with treatment. Even after they have recovered from the disease, cats can still act as a carrier, shedding the virus up to several months later. The recommended vaccine for cats for both diseases is the 3-in-1 FVRCP vaccine.

“The best way to keep your pets healthy is to have them vaccinated against these diseases,” explained Dr. Katrina Fleer, DMV and medical director of VIP Petcare. “We highly recommend that you bring your dog or cat to one of our clinics in your area, and we’re even making it even easier by offering a $10 discount off of any vaccination package through the end of January.”

You know how bad you feel when you get a cold or flu; protecting your pet from winter illnesses is just another way to show just how much you love them.

For Cats

Feline Herpesvirus

Upper respiratory infections like feline herpesvirus (FVH-1), appearing as a head cold, can occur in cats of all ages, but especially in kittens, pregnant cats, or those with lower immunity. At times, no symptoms occur, but even so, a cat can still be carrying the virus and spread it to other cats.

Feline herpesvirus is often found in multi-cat households or kennels where overcrowding is present. Visible symptoms include sneezing, watery or pus-filled nasal discharge, eyelid spasm that closes the eye, runny eyes, lack of appetite, and fever.
Progress continues on construction of the more than 11-mile segment of Phase 2 of the Silver Line from the Wiehle-Reston East Metrorail Station westward through Dulles Airport and on to Ashburn in eastern Loudoun County.

Pedestrian bridges providing access to the stations from sides of the Dulles Toll Road/Dulles International Airport Access Highway corridor are in place at most stations. Electricity has been turned on to some parts of the system. Construction access has been secured to almost all needed areas. All six Phase 2 stations are up. Parking garages are coming along, track is being laid, and support facilities and train control rooms and traction power substations which will ensure a continuous flow of power to the trains are visible.

Such is the good news recently shared by project officials with Federal Transit Administration officials and leaders of local governments who are partners in the project being built by the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority. The project will be turned over to the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority when it is completed, and that agency will operate it as part of the region’s mass transit system.

Already clearly visible atop the aerial guideway structure is the Dulles Airport Station.

“Setting of the Pedestrian Bridges over the Toll Road and the DIAAH corridor over the past months and the continued transition of the look for the Dulles Station with the removal of the tower crane there after setting the canopy roof are the most dramatic events that changed the landscape around the project,” said John Kearney, the project’s construction manager.

Work continues on the other five stations—Reston Town Center, Herndon, Innovation Center, Loudoun Gateway and Ashburn.

The project is being built in two parts. The first includes the track, the systems, the stations, etc., and is 74 percent complete. The second is the rail yard and maintenance facility to service both the Silver Line and the rest of the Metro system. It is 61 percent complete, according to project executive director and vice president Charles Stark.

Looking forward Kearney pointed to the “future setting of the pedestrian bridges over the Dulles Greenway at the future Loudoun Gateway and Ashburn stations along with development of pavilions.”

“Hopefully we will see roof structures on these pavilions in the next quarter starting at Innovation Station south,” Kearney said.

Other upcoming events include:

- Connecting the traction power and tire breaker stations to the guideway and stations with power cables.
- Roofing, escalator installation, plumbing and electrical work and installation of concrete bridge decks at Innovation Center, Reston Town Center and Herndon stations.
- Continued installation of ballasted track at at-grade sections.
- Ongoing mechanical, plumbing, and elevator and escalator installation at Dulles Airport Station.
- Continuing installation of the Dulles Station canopy roof.

Ongoing work at the rail yard includes:

- Final grading, paving and utility installation.
- Roofing at several buildings. Construction of the train-wash facility.
- Track work.
Fairfax Building Parking Garages at Herndon and Innovation Stations

Fairfax County is building the parking garages that will serve commuters at the Herndon Station and at the Innovation Center Station.

Construction of the Herndon garage is more than 50 percent complete. It is being built near an existing county garage which has served as the Herndon Park and Ride lot to serve Fairfax Connector buses. The two garages will be connected by a bridge for pedestrians and vehicles.

The new garage is expected to be complete in late Spring 2019.

Construction of the Innovation Center Station garage is about 15 percent complete. Completion is also expected in late spring of 2019.

Rail Team Targets Repairs in Tysons

Get set Tysons businesses, residents and commuters.

Dulles Corridor Metrorail Project crews soon will be doing some maintenance and enhancement work along Routes 7 and 123 in early 2018.

Disruptions will be minimal and alerts will be issued to make sure no one is taken by surprise. In addition, any business whose access might be impacted will be contacted directly by project officials.

Here is some of what that work will include:

- Repair of storm drains and underdrains.
- Update driveways and sidewalks to meet ADA requirements.
- Improve drainage on a section of Route 123.
- Repair bus turnouts near the Spring Hill and McLean Metrorail stations.

Crews also will adjust the alignment of Old Meadow Road at Route 123, but that work will take place later in the year.

Silver Line Pedestrian Bridge Installation Moving Quickly

Dulles Corridor Metrorail Project workers have spent recent weeks systematically installing a series of pedestrian bridge segments that future Silver Line passengers will use to access the train stations. These images were taken during the installation of segments at the site of the future Reston Town Center Station.

Pedestrian bridges are being installed at every Phase 2 station except for Dulles Airport Station. The bridges will lead to pavilions on the north and south side of each of those stations except Loudoun Gateway, which only has a pavilion on the north side.

Installation of the many of the bridge segments required lane closures along the Dulles Toll Road (DTR), the Dulles International Airport Access Highway (DIAAH) and/or the Dulles Greenway. The final pedestrian bridge segments are expected to be installed by the end of 2017 or early in 2018.

MIKE STEWART TO MANAGE DULLES AIRPORT

The Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority has named Mike Stewart as vice president and airport manager for Washington Dulles International Airport. Stewart transitioned into his new role following the Dec. 8 retirement of Brian Leuck, who has served as vice president and airport manager since January 2017.

Stewart has served as vice president of airline business development at the Airports Authority for the last two years. He has held several other key positions at the Airports Authority and in the aviation industry, including Dulles Airport’s manager of airport administration, the Airports Authority’s manager of airline affairs, director of corporate real estate and airport affairs for Independence Air and management positions with US Airways and Piedmont Airlines.

“Mike brings significant experience and skills to his new role as airport manager,” said Airports Authority Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer Margaret McKenough. “We, at the Airports Authority, are pleased that Mike will lead the team of dedicated Dulles professionals serving the traveling public at the National Capital region’s premier international airport. I also want to thank Brian Leuck for the outstanding leadership he provided as airport manager, applaud his 29 years of dedicated service to Dulles International and wish him well in his retirement.”

Dulles Airport serves more than 22 million passengers per year and continues to grow its domestic and international passenger activity while handling more than 80 percent of the region’s international air travelers. Dulles has 39 airlines with nonstop service to 75 domestic and 56 international destinations, including 35 capitals around the world. A Metrorail station at Dulles Airport is under construction as part of the Silver Line project, scheduled for completion in 2020.

'I know God took only six days to create the world,' a disgruntled player at the club told me, 'but that was because He was working alone. If He'd had a partner to contend with, the job wouldn't have been finished on schedule—or done right.'

That impious remark was prompted by this deal: East-West could have beaten four hearts but didn't—and neither player was happy with his partner. When West led a spade, East took the ten, king and ace, and West discarded the eight and then the deuce of clubs. East then led a club.

'I thought my partner had the ace of clubs,' East contended. 'But South produced the ace, cashed the A-K of diamonds, led a trump to the seven, ruffed a diamond, led a trump to the ten and ruffed a diamond. He drew trumps with the ace, threw his last club on the good jack of diamonds and took the thirteenth trick with a trump.'

Do you see how East-West could beat four hearts? Which defender was responsible for letting South get home?

After the defense wins the first three tricks, someone must lead a trump. This play removes a vital entry to dummy before South has started the diamonds, and South must lose a club.

East can infer that West doesn't have the ace of clubs; otherwise West would ruff East's winning spade at the third trick and cash the setting trick. But only West knows he has three low trumps (he might have Q-x-x) and the diamonds well stopped. Therefore, West should ruff East's winner at Trick 3 and lead a trump to defeat the contract.

Excerpts taken from: Frank Stewart's Bridge Club. Pages 63.
Unlike us Baby Boomers, today's parents are involved in their kids' lives on a microscopic level. Helicopter mothers and tiger moms worry incessantly about gluten, high fructose corn sugar, lactose, bullies, global warming and all sorts of clear and present dangers lurking about. Lucky for us, they're not aware that the biggest threat of all, the real hazard to those little darlings is...wait for it...Grandma!

Since I moved to the West coast to be closer to my grandkids, I can tell you from personal experience that grandmas are Public Enemy #1. And now I'm livin' the Granny dream in San Diego being close to Julianna, a.k.a. JuJu, my 6-year-old granddaughter. My most recent golden opportunity came when my son and daughter-in-law took JuJu into my care for the entire weekend!

However, it wasn't without its challenges. They comprised a sheet of do's and don'ts which was longer than Harvey Weinstein's accuser list, covering everything from food to activities. The food taboos stated no dairy (including ice cream, milk and frozen yogurt), no sugar, no GMO's, no apples, and no gluten-anything. Of course, this eliminated 99% of any normal person's diet, leaving me to ponder, "What does this kid subsist on... water and organic mung beans?" As far as her recreational activities, TV time was limited strictly to an hour per day in favor of healthier pursuits like educational games and puzzles.

They dropped JuJu off and handed me her Little Mermaid suitcase and the dreaded list. I took them, smiled and said, "Have a wonderful time and don't worry. I'll keep the list right here on the kitchen table." Then I closed the door and promptly deposited it in my recycle bin. Channeling my inner Jewish Bubbe for guidance, I transformed myself into the grandma to end all grandmas. "A little sugar....what can it hurt? And no ice cream? It's a shonda...a knife in the heart."

The first fairy grandmother wish I granted JuJu was lunch at her favorite gourmet restaurant, Chuck E. Cheese. This is where I got my first taste of Karma coming back to bite me in my newly channeled Jewish tush. For those who haven't been to Chuck E. Cheese, it's a place more hazardous to your health than skydiving, smoking Camel cigarettes, and vacationing in Afghanistan. Their nutritious menu features a choice between greasy pizza with a side of greasy fries and greasy chicken nuggets with a side of greasy fries. The place is exploding with hyper kids running around shrieking and playing games on flashing, neon-fit machines, blasting out all kinds of loud sound effects. The whole scene came perilously close to inducing a grand mal seizure in my overstimulated brain. The kids play the games and collect tickets for their winnings, cashing them in before they leave. After spending 1½ hours and $45.00, JuJu had amassed 35 tickets, enough to trade in for the coveted prizes of a cheap plastic necklace and matching bracelet, both of which broke before we reached the car. Go, Chuck E. Cheesy.

Since I already had two Excedrin and a valium on board, I was ready for the next round of "fun." I achieved this handily and incurred a lactose-free infraction by treating JuJu to a big cup of frozen yogurt loaded with sprinkles and chocolate chips. Next, we caught "Boss Baby" at the local AMC theatre where a second and even more heinous sugar infraction took place when I purchased movie-sized boxes of Red Vines and Gummy Bears. So, what does "movie sized" mean? Duh—160 grams of sugar, that's what. Upon arriving home, we spent an hour at the pool after which I served a delicious three course dinner of Kraft Mac n' Cheese, lemonade, and popsicles for dessert.

After dinner, I pulled out the giant Frozen puzzle I bought for us to work together. However, it was a bit advanced for Julianna and she quickly lost interest. So what's a Grandma/Bubbe to do? No problem. Like any other tech savvy 6-year-old, JuJu was able to figure out my complicated remote in two seconds flat, expertly navigating the Netflix menu. Scrolling through at warp speed, she found her favorite movie, Moana and watched it...twice. She sang every song with gusto and performed the dance routines as well. My little star. So, how could I refuse when she begged me to stay up a little longer to watch Madagascar? After three "Puleeeeze Grandmas" I was dead matzoh.

Weekend with Grandma

We had such a fabulous weekend! However, when my son and daughter-in-law picked JuJu up, I knew there was a high probability I'd be returning her with Type II diabetes and acute eye strain possibly requiring corrective lenses. "But, I kept telling myself, "It's not Grandma's fault—I just want to see her happy!" So, shoot me. Even Nancy Reagan couldn't just say 'no' to this precious child! ✶
Capricorn 12/22 - 1/19: Let your creativity loose this month if you plan a surprise for a loved one. You may get a lot of satisfaction from their delight.

Aquarius 1/20 - 2/18: Patience takes the stage as events draw to a conclusion this month, but an even pace and attitude smooths the way for success.

Pisces 2/19 - 3/20: Swallow your pride and get back in touch with a friend you dropped for reasons that may seem silly right now.

Aries 3/21 - 4/19: Some things are tedious, a sad fact of life. Start planning those into your schedule and you'll find things go better this month. But don't let the schedule become a tyrant.

Taurus 4/20 - 5/20: Look for a familiar pattern this month to avoid a pitfall. Good signs ahead for career initiatives if you don't let history repeat itself.

 Gemini 5/21 - 6/20: If a certain person is repeatedly rude to you, try detaching from the situation. Stars say returning the behavior in kind only hurts you in the eyes of others.

Cancer 6/21 - 7/22: Stars reveal a test of commitment is coming your way. This could involve family, work or friends. It could involve a special project. Respond with effort as you analyze the truth of the matter.

Leo 7/23 - 8/22: The month starts well with romance brewing on the Full Moon Feb. 1. It is a pleasant time, but don't let it distract you from monthly tasks.

Virgo 8/23 - 9/22: Face an uncomfortable situation and do your duty. Others will take care of the situation if you let them, but your own happiness increases when you meet the challenge.

Libra 9/23 - 10/21: This month could be pivotal for health issues. Gather your courage and resolve. Steps you take now will ripple through the rest of 2018 and even beyond.

Scorpio 10/22 - 11/21: A frugal approach to finances is in order this month. Identify places to save, but don't deprive yourself of the little things you love.

Capricorn 12/22 - 1/19: A friend's success makes you happy, but a little bit jealous. Beware of comparing yourself to others. Instead focus on the progress you've made. Make adjustments, if necessary.
